Finances Discussed.

Both reports were adopted as read. When it was learned that there was a deficit in the treasury of the Home Bureau, there was considerable discussion as to the finances, the future budget of the Home Bureau and the women present made it very plain that in order to carry on their work efficiently and satisfactorily they would have to have at least $500 more than last year's budget called for. The discussion resulted in its being voted by the Farm Bureau members to call upon their board of directors to give such financial assistance to the Home Bureau as they deemed advisable and possible. Miss Fischer, manager of the Home Bureau, however, made the pertinent statement that while temporary assistance would be appreciated it would not remedy the real financial evil and suggested that that remedy lay with the supervisors of the county.

Directors Re-elected.

The next business to be transacted was the election of three directors for the Farm Bureau for a term of three years and of three members of the executive committee of the Home Bureau for an equal number of years.

Retiring members in each case were re-elected: Messrs. Harder of Lake Katrine, Hovland of Marlborough and McElhose of Wallkill as fire organizations for the splendid cooperation accorded them. Mr. Wigsten said if the farmers would only communicate to him their troubles he would be only too glad to help them all he could.

C. C. DuMond, member of the Farm Bureau executive committee, expressed his opinion that the development of leaders from the farm body is one of the most effectual ways of raising the level of the business of farming. John Beatty of Hurley praised the women for their stand on the milk problem.

President Davis announced then that Harry Eppes would lead again in the singing which would conclude the festivities of the evening. Mr. Eppes forced Mr. Davis to come to the platform where he reminded the gathering that Mr. Davis on January 1 would assume his duties as assemblyman at Albany. Much cheering followed. Then he led the audience in the singing of "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" and the final song of the evening, "Good Night Ladies." The Rev. Mr. Polhemus dismissed the company with prayer.

Farm and Home Bureau Members Merry at Banquet

Sumptuous Turkey Dinner at Epworth Hall Followed by Witty and Serious Talks, Presentation of Prizes, Singing, Sketch and Hat Show.

Nearly 300 persons attended the annual banquet of the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureaus in Epworth Hall on Clinton avenue Wednesday night. Opinion was expressed that it was one of the best attended banquets ever held under the auspices of these organizations.

The Rev. C. H. Polhemus of Ulster Park asked grace. He was followed by Harry M. Eppes of Accord, the ardent song leader of the Farm Bureau, who led the gathering in the singing of "America." All joined in lustily, as they did time and again during the evening under the leadership of Mr. Eppes. Paul Zucca playing the violin, Charles Terwilliger, the saxophone, and George Schilling at the piano helped make the welkin ring.

The sumptous turkey dinner was served by the King's Daughters' Sunday school class of the Clinton avenue M. E. Church, headed by Mrs. Annie Kiefer. The ladies served the food piping hot and saw to it that every one had plenty. Songs by Paul Zucca and George Schilling brought vigorous applause.

With the tables cleared, President Millard Davis called the assemblage to order and announced that the Ulster County Farm Bureau as a result of the intensive membership campaign just closed has the largest paid-up membership of any county bureau in the state. He said that the banquet marked the close of the campaign and that although many counties had fallen to a $2 and $3 membership fee, and $5 fee has been maintained by the local bureau.

Later Mr. Davis brought Miss Nellie Elmendorf, office manager of the organization, before the audience and paid tribute to her faithful work to the organization. He also thanked E. H. Hathaway for always being on hand and working hard for every bureau project.

Then he called on Miss Flora Rose, head of the School of Home Economics at Cornell University. In a witty way she stated that there is an oversupply of cabbages and that everyone should eat lots of it and thereby do a good turn to their health and their fellow farmers. In a more serious vein Miss Rose stressed the need of plenty of sunlight.

Miss Clarabell Nye, assistant leader of home demonstration work in the state, was next called upon to speak. She claimed that Home Bureau finance and a Home Bureau program are closely allied. It is the same as is often the case in church work, three-fourths of the time is spent in raising the money for the work, leaving one one-fourth of the time to actually do the work. Miss Nye pleaded for a more liberal appropriation at the hands of the board of supervisors. She asked that the members spread the knowledge gained in the Home Bureau and expressed her belief that the press could be a potent factor in this connection.

Every community has within the last few months put on a skit entitled "Joshing the Janitor." The community giving the best presentation was to have the honor of putting it on at the banquet and would be presented a silver cup. The Kyserike-Alligerville community won.

Arthur Atkins as boss and Drury A. Midgley as negro janitor, both of Kyserike and Alligerville, kept the audience laughing every minute. Midgley's tale of sufferings from rheumatism and his loquacious sermon on "Old Mother Hubbard" was a splendid example of negro dialect. They were presented with the silver cup by President Davis.

Mrs. Elmer Smith, president of the Home Bureau, presented the other prize of the evening, which also went to the Kyserike-Alligerville community. The prize was a banner for having the highest number of members over their quota. The quota for the district was 25 and 89 members were secured. Mrs. Henry Neff, in accepting the banner, explained that credit for this accomplishment was largely due to the efforts of Mrs. Russel Trowbridge.

Fred Vaughn of West Hurley and Guy Davenport of Accord pulled off the stunts of freeing themselves from the strings tied about their wrists and joining them together. Their contortions provided a fund of amusement.

Mrs. William A. Warren, vice-president of the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau Association, announced that the women of the county are going to put on a milk campaign for the coming year. Members of the Dairyman's League who were present gave the ladies a rising vote of thanks for the expression of interest in the milk problem evidenced by the announcement of a milk campaign.

The ladies of the Home Bureau have been working hard on the latest project, millinery, carried on by that organization. Under the direction of Harry M. Eppes a hat show was staged. A number of the ladies came on the platform wearing the hat that they had made under the direction of the Home Bureau. Mr. Eppes's criticism of and comment upon each hat was sparking and to the point and made the hat show one of the features of the evening.

Miss Jennie Fisher, manager of the Home Bureau, and Murray Wigsten, manager of the Farm Bureau, thanked the members of their respec-

Small Vote Polled at Last Election For Social-Labor and Workers' Parties, Does Not Merit Political Recognition.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Albany, Dec. 4.—As a result of the extremely small vote polled on last Election Day, the Social-Labor and the Workers' parties do not become recognized political parties in New York state to the extent of being given a place on the ballot, except through petition. The New York state election law requires that a party shall poll not less than 25,000 votes for governor. The Social-Labor's candidate for governor received 4,923 votes, while the Workers' party candidate polled 7,613 votes.

According to election figures filed with Secretary of State Hamilton, the Social-Labor party in this state mustered a total of 9,928 votes for its candidate for president, while the Workers' party gave its presidential candidate a total of 8,241.

New Plan for Muscle Shoals

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Dec. 4.—A finish fight over disposition of the government's $100,000,000 Muscle Shoals water power project was launched in the senate this afternoon when Senator George W. Norris, Republican of Nebraska, opened debate in defense of his government ownership plan. Norris urged the senate to create a government corporation to operate the project. His plan was offered as a substitute for the bill passed by the house, which accepted Henry Ford's offer for the site.

Oust Insurgent From Committee

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Administration leaders planned further steps today to remove insurgents from all positions of power in the senate.

The next step proposed by Republican chieftains was the ousting of Senator Ladd, Republican of North Dakota, from the Republican steering committee.

Coolidge Gives New Golden Rule in Chicago Talk

"Prosperity Cannot Be Divorced from Humanity," Theme of Speech on First Western Trip He Has Made Since Becoming President—Help Those Who Help Themselves.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—On his first trip west as chief executive President Coolidge today propounded a new industrial golden rule, which, he declared, must be applied to agriculture and commerce if the former is to survive and the latter is to continue to prosper.

"Prosperity cannot be divorced from humanity," was its burden.

The president's message to these two great industries was delivered at a luncheon tendered him by the Chicago Commercial Club, in whose membership are many industrial leaders of this mammoth market place.

He urged the commercial and industrial side of the nation to pay less attention to "wheat and corn and hogs, to their transportation, to their prices," and to give more thought to the men and women who produce them.

"Do you wish to maintain a system which will contribute to their welfare and to your own?" he challenged his luncheon hosts, "or to permit, even unintentionally, methods of doing business under which their want and distress will ultimately result in the failure of your own success and prosperity? You people of commerce, you people of the city, are an integral part of the life of agriculture, of the life of the country."

Mr. Coolidge applied the same principle to America's foreign relations. He warned that, in the long course of events, this nation could not hope to enjoy a permanent level of superiority in material wealth over other peoples of the earth.

"In the long course of affairs," he said, "and in a world which has become little more than a great neighborhood, our common sense must tell us, if our self interest did not, that our prosperity, our advancement, our portion of good fortune, must depend largely upon the share that shall be allotted to or neighbors. At the last, those of us who are partners in the supreme service of building and bettering our civilization must go up or down, must succeed or fail together in our one common enterprise."

The president drew his text from the story of Joseph and the Israelites and the seven years of famine as unfolded in the Book of Genesis.

He depicted for his audience a striking analogy between conditions today and the experiences of the Hebrews. He called attention to the "seven years of plenty" that came to America during the war and he noted the "seven lean years" that followed in its wake.

The trials of the Israelites, who in their time of famine went to the filled warehouses of Joseph, he likened to those of the American farmer in the throes of post-war depression.

"All the trials of depression which the farmer has suffered will not have been in vain if, as was the case with Israel, they are able to contribute to the world a new thought, a new impulse, a new ideal," the president said.

"I recognize the necessity, if we are to better the lot of men, of large productivity and material prosperity. But we cannot think in terms of that alone. We cannot suppose that we are to be benefited by great production unless the men and women who furnish it are themselves benefited by it."

"We can help only those who will help themselves," he added.

"I should never advocate the sacrifice of any part of our prosperity because of the vague hope that in following indiscriminate impulses of kindliness we might help some who are in worse condition than ourselves.

"I do not believe any people ever was strong enough to accomplish any permanent good in the world through the indiscriminations of mere unorganized, undirected prosperity."

"But," the president added, "we cannot hope indefinitely to maintain our country as a specially favored community, an isle of contentment lifted above the general level of the average of the standards of humanity."

"If we could not avoid involvement in a war whose causes were foreign, and whose issues were chiefly alien to us, because we had settled them for ourselves long ago," he asked, "how can we hope to avoid our full share of responsibility in connection with other world problems which, if they are ever to be solved, must be solved in an atmosphere of peace and good will?

"We know that the way to assured and permanent peace is slow and difficult. We know that no nation can travel that way alone. We tried, and we failed.

"It is a way that can be travelled only in company with others equally zealous for the same goal. Among these fellows of the road there must be mutual understanding and mutual faith and confidence.

"I can see in the tranquility of Europe a benefit that will reach American industry and agriculture.

It is such thoughts as these, I am convinced, that have been giving inspiration to the American people as they have lately surveyed the state of the world and sought their proper place and part in it. We have attempted to perform services for the European nations, because by that means in a broad way we were serving ourselves. We want to see them raised up so far as possible to our own economic standards. We want to see in their prosperity an opportunity for larger markets for our own production. We wish to help them, moreover, because it is only through service that we can develop our individual and national lives. It is along this course of action that we are most likely to contribute to those conditions which will be most effective for maintaining universal peace and most likely to make the largest contribution within our power to the advancement of human welfare.

Philip Hasbrouck Died Wednesday

Member of Old Ulster County Family Dies Suddenly at His Home in Walden—Was Vice-President of Schrade Cutlery Company.

The death of Philip Hasbrouck, which occurred at his residence, No. 28 Church street in the village of Walden, shortly before noon on Wednesday, was a shock and stunning surprise to his many friends in that village and the Wallkill valley, where he was well and favorably known and liked by all with whom he ever came in contact or with whom he had had business or social intercourse. For the last week he had been at his home, resting and recuperating from a slight heart attack, which, although troublesome, was not considered dangerous but which needed relaxation and rest. On the morning of his death, he was bright and cheerful before noon prepared for dinner, when without notice or warning he suddenly expired.

Phillip Hasbrouck was born in New Paltz in the old stone house on the outskirts of the village which is now known as the "Memorial House," on April 1, 1860. He was the youngest son of Joseph B. Hasbrouck and Sarah Maria LeFevre and through his ancestry on both paternal and maternal sides came from the old Huguenot stock which settled the Wallkill valley in and around The Paltz. He was educated in the New Paltz Free Academy and later attended the Union Academy in Jefferson county, New York. While he was yet a young man, his father and family removed to near Walden, where was purchased the Twin Island farm on the west side of the Wallkill river, where Mr. Hasbrouck engaged in farming and later in business in the village of Walden. During all of that time he retained his many friendships in and around New Paltz besides making a large number of warm and close friends not only in the town of Montgomery but throughout the county of Orange.

He was much interested in politics, and with his large circle of friends, he was the natural and logical candidate of the Republican party for the office of superintendent of the poor of the county of Orange in 1893, to which office he was elected by one of the largest majorities which has ever been accorded a candidate for county office. He served his constituents and filled the office until 1899 when he retired from public office and entered into a partnership with William D. Sloan in the flour, feed, coal and lumber business under the name of Hasbrouck & Sloan at Walden, and operated the steam milling property now occupied by A. B. Garrison. In 1904 upon the organization of the Schrade cutlery industry in the village of financially interested, he was elected the vice-president of that corporation, and continuously held that office from its organization in 1904 to the date of his death; in fact he was the only vice-president that the Schrade Cutlery Company ever had and was the only officer who had held the same office continuously from the time of the organization of the company to the present time, and saw the Schrade Cutlery Company develop from its small beginning in 1904 to one of the largest cutlery industries in the village of Walden.

On November 22, 1897, Mr. Hasbrouck was united in marriage to Mary F. Matthews, daughter of George Matthews of Walden, who survives him. A brother, James Hasbrouck of Bridgeton, N. J., and a sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Kline of Sanford, North Carolina, also survive.

Mr. Hasbrouck was a member of Orange Hose Company of Walden; of Goshen Lodge, No. 365, Free and Accepted Masons; and of the Colony Club of Walden.

Funeral services will be held at his late residence on Saturday afternoon, December 6, at 2 o'clock.

Making Store Burglar Proof.

Recent lootings of stores in and about Kingston prompted the Leventhal Brothers, who conduct a fur retail and manufacturing establishment on Wall street opposite the courthouse, to make their store burglar proof. Steel gratings are being placed in all windows in the rear of the building and the doorways are protected by heavy steel doors. Installation is being made by the Herrman Iron Works of 311 Abeel street. H. Leventhal announced also that the front door will have a burglar alarm attached. The firm, which has a store in New York, has been doing an active business in Kingston for nearly twenty-five years.

Chowder Sale Postponed.

The clam chowder sale by the Epworth League of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, scheduled for tomorrow, has been postponed to a later date.

Colonel Chandler Will Stay Here

Duties to Patients and Kingston City Hospital Greater, in His Opinion, Than Call of Schenectady to Reorganize Police Force There.

Colonel George F. Chandler will not go to Schenectady to reorganize the police force in that city. That fact was made plain at a conference held with Mayor Campbell and Commissioner Ramsey of Schenectady Wednesday evening at the Stuyvesant Hotel by Colonel Chandler. At the conference, however, Colonel Chandler gave the committee some suggestions as to what, in his opinion, was the best method to reorganize the Schenectady police force.

Mayor Campbell was anxious to have Colonel Chandler go to Schenectady to take charge of the reorganization of the city police force or to act in an advisory capacity. Failing in that, an effort was made to have him act in an advisory capacity from here; all of which he declined.

Colonel Chandler made it plain that owing to his work here as a surgeon, he would be unable to meet with the request as he felt that it would not be doing justice to his patients or to the Kingston City Hospital to take up police work at this time. He made it plain that his work as a surgeon came first and that he was finished with police work. It was not a question of salary or money, but the time had come when he did not intend to let anything interfere with the practice of his profession.

Wednesday evening was a busy one for Colonel Chandler, for before attending the conference with the Schenectady mayor he met with the board of public works, of which he is a member. At the close of the public works board meeting at 10:30 o'clock that evening he hurried to the Stuyvesant Hotel where he was in conference with Mayor Campbell and Commissioner Ramsey until a late hour.

Campbell Says Chandler Helped

Schenectady's Mayor Says Major Chandler Gave Him Helpful Suggestions on Reorganizing Police Department.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Schenectady, N. Y., Dec. 4.—With a complete reorganization of the police department fast being perfected, the authorities declared today they were confident they had gained the upper hand in the crime wave which has been sweeping the city for the last ten days and which resulted in the slaying of Police Captain Albert L. Youmans, chief of the vice squad.

An arrest in connection with the killing of Captain Youmans is expected within 24 hours, one police official said.

The authorities are following two new clues in the murder of Arthur Spring, 20, who was stabbed to death ten days ago when he sought to protect two young girls from the insults of a man.

Mayor William Campbell and Police Commissioner George E. Ramsey returned today from Kingston, where they conferred last night with Major George F. Chandler, former superintendent of state police, regarding the reorganization of the local police department.

"Major Chandler has given us some very helpful suggestions," the mayor said.

It was reported Major Chandler might come here for a few days to act in an advisory capacity in connection with the reorganization of the police force.

The mayor declared today he would like to get a "General Butler" to "clear up" the crime situation in the city.

A second letter in the handwriting of Captain Youmans, which is alleged to involve a police official in the vice crusade, was turned over to District Attorney Alexander T. Blessing today by Edward Youmans, brother of the slain officer.

Police Chief James W. Rynex, whose resignation was requested early in the week by the mayor, is expected to quit tomorrow.

District Attorney Blessing said today he has a good description of the automobile in which the slayers of Captain Youmans are believd to have made their escape the night of the murder.

Minor Auto Accidents.

Two minor auto accidents were reported to the police Wednesday night. At the Rondout Creek Bridge the cars of Anthony G. Mesereole and Grover Walker collided, and at Broadway and Broderick street the cars of William Lake and William Cranston came together.

Suggest Change In Sewer Plan

City Engineer Hallinan Submits Plan Affording Financial Relief to Stephan Street and Clifton Avenue Residents—May be Adopted.

At the regular monthly meeting of the board of public works last week, a delegation of property owners from Stephan street and Clifton avenue, headed by Allen S. Hammond, appeared before the board seeking relief from the excessive cost of the new Stephan street and Clinton avenue sewer then under construction, but not half completed. At that time the board ordered all work on the sewer stopped and directed City Engineer John F. Hallinan to investigate and ascertain if it was possible to change the route of the sewer and lower the cost. Under the present plan the sewer is laid through solid rock in a trench from 7 to 15 feet in depth, which has made the cost of construction so high.

At an adjorned meeting of the board Wednesday night the city engineer submitted a written report, and stated that the total length of the sewer was 1,884 feet, of which 809 feet had been completed, leaving an uncompleted balance of 1,075 feet. The depth of the sewer ran from 7 to 15 feet. There had been paid for labor the sum of $9,800 and not one-half of the job was completed.

"In seeking a remedy," said Mr. Hallinan, "to cut down the cost of the job I have had levels run and soundings taken from the existing sewer in Shufeldt street, through Shufeldt streeet to Clifton avenue, through Clifton avenue to a point opposite the Allen Hamond property, and found that the work would be considerably lessened if that route is substituted. The total length of the new plan will be 1,473 feet, or 398 feet more than the old plan. The average cut will be about 4 feet against an average of 10 feet under the old plan.

"The excavation will be about 700 cubic yards against about 2,000 cubic yards under the old plan. Eight inch pipe can be substituted in place of 655 feet of 12 inch pipe, and 260 feet of 10 inch pipe called for by the present plan, which will mean a considerable saving on this item.

"From my investigation I firmly believe that if the new plan is adopted the sewer can be completed for one-third the cost of the present plan. For illustration: If it takes $9,000 to complete the sewer under the present plan, under the submitted plan it would cost $3,000."

City Engineer Hallinan explained that if the new plan was adopted, a right of way would have to be obtained through the Shufeldt property. This right of way it was likely that Mr. Shufeldt would grant provided it eliminated his assessment for the new sewer. In other words he would pay his share of the sewer assessment by granting the right of way through his property.

After talking the matter over the board decided to have the interested property owners notified of the proposed change and if they desired it, the board would adopt the proposed plan providing a petition asking the board to do so was filed by the interested property owners.

The board directed Superintendent Van Keuren to install a traffic standard at Foxhall and Hasbrouck avenues.

The matter of dredging the Rondout creek at the sewer outlet was left to the city engineer and superintendent with power.

The board will meet later in the month to discuss what street work will be taken up next year and also to make up a budget for next year.

Queer Marriage Customs

In many parts of India, after the marriage ceremony the bride and bridegroom are tied together by the corners of their garments and compelled to parade the full length of the village to signify that they are united for life. At a Singalese wedding the presumably happy couple are tied together by their thumbs.

In Turkey, when the bridegroom unveils his bride to have the first view of her after the marriage, they both look into a mirror and then knock heads together so that the images may appear united.

In certain portions of China the bride is carried on a servant's back over a slow fire, on each side of which are arranged a pair of the bridegroom's shoes. Another custom is that of lifting the bride over the threshold of her new home.

Admits Guilt in 14 Murder Cases

Germany's Celebrated Attic Ogre Duaks Responsibility in Balance of 27 Cases for Which He Is on Trial—Tells Details With Glee.

(Copyright 1924, by International News Service).

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Court House, Hanover, Germany, Dec. 4.—Fritz Haarmann, Hanover's attic ogre, testified here today in his trial for the murder of 27 persons that he had kept one of his victims—a boy—prisoner for two weeks, gloating over him as a cat does with a mouse, before he butchered him and cut the body to bits.

The strangest murderer Germany ever has seen told of this crime with childish pride, while the prosecutor coaxed detail after detail from him patiently, even benignly. Two hundred persons stared at him, some through opera glasses, until the judge rebuked them with the remark that "this court room is no theatre."

In the midst of his sickening recital, Haarmann passionately begged the judge:

"Please hurry my trial, I'd rather be beheaded than sent to an insane asylum."

Haarmann had gleefully resigned himself to decapitation—Hanover still executes with the axe—as a fitting crescendo to what he regards as a suite murders of artistry equal to fine music or exquisite painting.

Then he resumed his tale of murdering that captive boy. He said that he did not know what to do with the lad's head, so he hid it between the stove and a box of cucumbers.

Police looking for a clue to the missing youngster were so stupid, Haarmann said, that they did not find the skull.

When his story became particularly revolting, the spectators were excluded from the court room.

"I am perfectly sane, too," Haarmann told the judge with impish gestures.

He admitted killing fourteen persons, but thought it might have been thirty.

"A few more do not matter," he said.

"We can prove 27 murders," the prosecutor interrupted, "and possibly we can connect Haarmann with three others, but that's all."

The prosecution said it believed he had committed ten other killings, but Haarmann, with the air of one who wishes no undue credit, broke in with:

"Those skulls weren't from me."

When questioned about Hans Grans, his alleged accomplice, Haarman said "I don't want to drag him in to it. He is too young."

He repeatedly called out: "I want to be beheaded." Then I'll be rid of my tortures."

"My father was a swine. He always beat me," he said at another time. Then he bursts into sobs and said: "But my mother, she was good."

The judge learned that threats to kill Haarmann had been made by witnesses. As a result, all witnesses will be searched for weapons.

The question of whether Haarmann actually sold the flesh of his victims for human consumption will not be gone into during the trial. It has been practically proved that Haarmann did this, but this phase probably will be covered up in order not to excite the Hanover populace even more than it is at present.

It is regarded as certain that the prisoner will be declared accountable for the crimes, although alienists agree that he is abnormal and weak-minded.

MOMBACCUS HEIGHTS.

Mombaccus Heights., Dec. 4.—William DePuy made a business trip to Kingston on Wednesdal last, and on Thursday left for Unadilla to spend a few days with his son and daughter-in-law there.

Word was received by relatives here of the death of Mrs. Lucy Sherman at her home in Brooklyn on Sunday evening, November 22. She was a sister of Ambrose and Calvin Quick and Mrs. Harriet Morehouse, of this place. Several nephews and nieces reside in this locality, besides a number of relatives in other places.

Despite the snow storm on Saturday, the party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Lennon was well attended, and proved a great success. Guests were present from Napanoch, Pataukunk, Mombaccus and this place. All spent a very enjoyable evening. An abundance of sandwiches, cakes, coffee and ice cream were served. Dancing and games were also enjoyed. The party was held in honor of the fourteenth birthday of Glenmore Lennon, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Lennon.

Harold Van Etten has gone to Poughkeepsie, where he has employment again with the De Laval Separator Company.

Mrs. Dan Green of Poughkeepsie spent two weeks recently with her mother, Mrs. Harriet Morehouse, here.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Smith and children of Pataukunk, spent Thanksgiving with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. Van Etten.

Miss Dorothy Goldberg has gone to the city. Her brother, Charley, who had employment there for a time, has returned home.

Miss Elva Mertine has been spending a few days with Mrs. W. DePuy.

Miss Eleanor Smith of Pataukunk spent from Thursday until Sunday afternoon with her grandparents here.

Returns Unchanged.

John McGrane of this city, arrested by Deputy Sheriff Gaynor for disorderly conduct in resisting an officer on the evening of November 26, at Edgeville, was discharged by Judge Mosher of the town of Ulster on Tuesday that the defendant had consented to take another young man from Baldwin's dance hall where he was acting in a disorderly manner, and was not resisting the officer as charged.

French Ensemble Coat and Frock Combination

This is one of the popular French ensemble coat and frock combinations, developed in a fabric covered with gold embroidery and trimmed with dark gray squirrel.

Directoire Holds Place in New Winter Fashions

The directoire has unquestionably made its mark on the winter fashions, but in costume details rather than in silhouette, says a fashion writer in the Kansas City Star. Such details are to be found in the tiered or swinging shoulder cape; the wide collars and cuffs; the long, wide revers seen everywhere on coat dresses, and the jabot.

The more molded line, following more closely the figure than in seasons past, again reflects the directoire. Strangely enough, these are details of the men's clothes of the time rather than the women's, and whether the high-waisted dress will actually play an important part is questionable—except in misses' dress,—where it undoubtedly has a youthful appeal.

The silhouette that may be looked for as the winter advances is a reaction from the directoire high-waisted tryout to a normal line which will be accompanied by greater fullness of skirt. Such Paris houses as Vionnet, Worth and Poiret, and houses in this country have struck this new note, which will presumably be accepted by exclusively dressed women.

This, however, is still a thing of the future. For the present the straight line, with assuredly more ample skirt than formerly, holds the place of honor.

Chic Frocks and Coats for Little Girls' Wear

Just because her years are few in number, let no one suppose that Miss Six-Year-Old is indifferent to her clothes. In fact it is often surprising to discover the definite ideas that these small persons have concerning their frocks and coats, especially in the matter of color.

There is a most engaging simplicity about children's clothes of today and a certain chic that is always in keeping with the youthful spirit. One notices among the latest models a marked tendency to employ plaids. These gay materials are used with the greatest success in the fashioning of little school frocks.

A material that is becoming more and more popular for school and play frocks is challis which now comes in most interesting patterns. One design reproduces amusing little Japanese figures in different colors on a dark blue ground.

Small two-toned checks are also much in evidence and in colors a prominent position is accorded shutter green. The smartest little straight-line coats are developed in this shade as well as demure little frocks of flannel or crepe de chine trimmed with green a bit lighter in tone.

More Material Is Used in Fashioning Gowns

While many of the new frocks give the effect of extreme slimness, a close study of details reveals the fact that considerably more material goes into the fashioning of gowns of this season than was used in the season just past. However, writes a correspondent, these extra yards are so skillfully handled that one is not conscious of the change.

Another point brought out by sartorial authorities is that there is apparently an attempt to deviate a bit from the absolutely straightline and to adjust the material so that the lines of the figure are subtly suggested. This suggestion of a raised waistline was seen all summer and already the question has been raised as to whether this presages a return of the high waistline of the Empire period. It will be interesting to watch developments along this line. Thus far the new models in a great majority of cases dispense with the waistline entirely.

Uses for Precious Metal

About one-fourth of the annual production of gold is used for money, the remainder, three-fourths being consumed in dentistry, in the arts, such as jewelry, gilding and gold leaf work, and the melting up of the enamel ions from various causes.

TOBASCO HEIGHTS.

Tobasco Heights, Dec. 4.—The pupils of the school, who had perfect attendance for a month, were excused for half a day last Friday. Those pupils were Golden Krum, Israel Redbert, Carrie Gray, Mabel Krum, Ada Gray and Mary Osborne.

Grace Alexander of Mt. Tremper has been spending a short time with friends in this place.

The teacher, Miss Edna Krum, left Wednesday evening for Wallkill to spend Thanksgiving at Irvington-on-Hudson, where she attended high school. She also made a visit to her sister, who is employed at Letchworth Village. Miss Krum returned home on Sunday evening in order to open school on Monday, after the four days' vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Markle and family of Detroit; Mr. Markle's father, and Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Decker of Kerhonkson, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Judson Decker of this place.

All are pleased to state that the telephone operator who so bravely operated the switch board at Pine Hill last Thursday night when flames swept part of the village, was Miss Esther Wynkoop, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa Wynkoop, of this place. Although the office was on fire and windows broken in, Miss Wynkoop sat at her post until five o'clock when the fire was extinguished.

Lester and Homer Wynkoop spent from Wednesday last until Sunday with their uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Elvin Martine, and family, at New Paltz.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Tracy Baker for a long and prosperous married life. Mrs. Baker was formerly of this place and has a host of friends here, who join in wishing her good luck.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Bell and son of Kerhonkson, spent Sunday afternoon at Asa Wynkoop's.

Mr. and Mrs. Asa Beringer and daughter, Ada, of Olive Bridge, spent Sunday last with her brother, Asa Wynkoop and family.

Irving Van Vliet is ill at this writing.

Miss Celia Redberg has left for New York city, where she has employment.

Mrs. Josiah Terwilliger is not very well at this writing.

Mr. and Mrs. Vaughn Decker and Vaughn, Jr., spent Saturday evening with Asa Wynkoop and family.

Mary Osborne is ill at this writing.

Al. Van Vliet and brother, Irving, were callers at Judson Decker's on Monday evening.

Mrs. Emily Martine is spending some time at New Paltz with her son, Elvin, and family.

Miss Lillie Keator of Palenitown spent Monday with her grandparents in this place.

Why the Strife?

We are told that Cæsar, the philosopher once asked Pyrrhus what he would do when he had conquered Italy.

"I will conquer Sicily."

"And after Sicily?"

"Then Africa."

"And after you have conquered the world?"

"I will take my ease and be merry."

"Then," asked Cæsar, "why can you not take your ease and be merry now?"—Sir John Lubbock.

FAILURE OF ENFORCEMENT.

Wayne B. Wheeler, general counsel for the Anti-Saloon League, surprised his hearers when in his recent address in Philadelphia he admitted the failure of prohibition enforcement, and in effect the failure of prohibition. He cited wholesale violation of the law, warehouses crowded with confiscated automobiles, development of a wholesale business in alcohol and liquor substitutes, employment of worthless officers, forging of permits, debauching of ethical standards among druggists and physicians The wettest of wets could hardly have painted a more discouraging picture. Thus the leading representative of the drys agreed altogether with the protesting wets as to the actual facts of the situation.

But of course Mr. Wheeler did not agree with them as to the proper remedy. Their remedy is the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and a return to pre-Volstead conditions—with certain modifications including the elimination of the saloon. His remedy is more enforcement. "Nothing is wrong with prohibition but incomplete enforcement," he said, "and that can and will be remedied." He thought the lack of effective enforcement was largely due to lack of quality in enforcement officials, and that the remedy is to be found in the employment of efficient and trustworthy enforcement officers—men, he presumably meant, who not only know their business but who can not be bribed, who will heroically refuse to be paid for "protection." But obviously the effort to secure such men has been made from the beginning, and the question naturally arises as to whether such an effort can be made very much more successful in the future than in the past.

CLOTHES AND CLASS.

There can still be found people who think that in the short skirt there is danger to public morals, but this is unimportant because everybody knows women are going to wear what they please, no matter what is endangeded. Men, however, must acknowledge that they owe a duty to the race, and they can not likewise exhibit their legs without endangering democracy—or such, in general, is the view of Prof. Shaw of the University of New York, who says:

The present fad for short breeches is one of the things which stand in the way of the great excursion into equality Knickers and democracy do not go together. All who appear in short breeches tend to create the impression that they prefer an aristocratic, privileged form of government.

This inference is not quite as baseless and ridiculous as it may seem. Trousers were extended down to the foot after nearly all the French aristocrats in knee breeches lost their heads under the guillotine, and thus "pants" became in a sense the badge of democracy. Professor Shaw argues that knickers are worn only by golfers, vacationists, or people who wish to appear as such; when a man "appears in abbreviated breeches it is evident that he means to play or pose." That is still more or less true. Therefore knickerbockers do suggest toiling or play time, and can not be associated with the toiling masses. Thus class distinction is marked by clothes, which is "destructive of democracy." The argument is pointed enough as far as it goes, but it overlooks the fact that, altogether apart from knickers or any other fad, sufficient money to procure fine raiment of the latest cut always has and always will provide class distinction of a sort.

The Ohio legislator who introduced a bill to regulate the temperature, so that it would never go below 58 degrees in winter or above 78 degrees in summer, must have been inspired by Mark Twain's memorable aphorism that everybody complains of the weather but nobody does anything about it. Mark would have the laugh of his life could he know that he had been taken so seriously. It may be, however, that the Ohio legislator is himself a jester—with a purpose. His remarkable proposition could well be the mark of high-grade intelligence, provided it was intended as a satire at the expense of the half-baked reformers prancing up and down the country, with much noise and clamor, as they call for the "regulation" of just about everything under the sun.

THE HEART AND EXERCISE.

In a former article I spoke about two physicians differing on a case of so called tuberculosis of the lungs.

The one who pronounced it tuberculosis won his argument by saying, "Well, if I'm wrong and he hasn't tuberculosis of the lungs, the treatment in the open air with good food will only be of help, whereas if I'm right, and he doesn't get this treatment, what about it?"

Now, the lungs are made of very soft tissue and trouble can spread rapidly unless extreme care is taken.

For this reason there can be no question that in cases of suspected trouble, it is better to treat the case as if it were really a lung condition than to take a chance upon waiting for a long standing "cold" or "cough" to get better.

This may mean some hardships, but time is a big factor and the sooner the healing influences of fresh air and good food are secured, the more likely is the case to recover.

But what about so called "heart disease?"

I believe we should take the other view of things so as not to cause alarm.

One of the mistakes we have been making in the past is in speaking of heart disease, or a heart murmur, as if it meant sudden death at any time.

The number of men who have had a heart murmur perhaps all their lives, or following some childish complaint, and who have never even suspected it, would total many thousands.

But when they were being examined for life insurance, the physician detected it, and according to the rules of the company had to reject them.

What was the result?

Many of them have been quite philosophical about it and said, "Well, I seem to be able to walk, run, play games, or work as well as anyone else, so I guess I'll get along all right.

Others, however, take the matter very much to heart, and begin to worry about it.

Worry kills just as surely as anything else, and so these chaps begin to have indigestion and sleepless nights.

They try to take all strain off the heart by resting whenever possible.

What is the result?

That the heart muscle becomes weaker than before, because of this very lack of exercise.

Your family doctor will tell you that a heart murmur, a leaky valve, never kills anyone just as long as the heart muscle keeps strong enough to do its work. And the way to keep it strong is not by resting or trying to save it, but by walking and other light forms of exercise.

Near Death in Slide Down Mountainside

In the early days Samuel Woodworth Cozzens was appointed to the position of territorial judge in Arizona. He served in that capacity for many years, and Companion readers revelled in tales of the frontier in Arizona from his pen. But, however much he wrote concerning his own adventures and those of his friends, he neglected to relate in the Companion the story of his long slide.

The judge was in the land of the Zuni, high on a mountain, when his foot slipped. In a moment he was moving down a long, steep pitch on his back. The slide was bare rock and fairly smooth, and his speed increased momentarily. Then his heel struck a projection, and he turned over with his face forward and proceeded on his stomach.

Involuntarily he had thrown both arms forward to save his face, and he was now scooting down with hands turned upward at the wrists just enough to keep his palms from scouring to the bone. His right hand touched a second projection, and his fingers grasped on it. The grip caused his body to slew round sideways. His left hand grabbed the little flange of rock and hung on. The abrupt stop together with the swift swing broke his right arm, but he clung with a death grip.

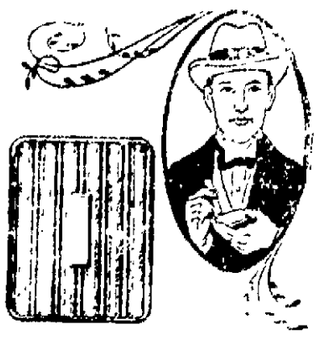

An old wrinkled grandfather Zuni at the top of the slope, seeing him, yelled as a coyote and ran for the pueblo. The judge hung on and waited. Below him the slide ended in a drop of hundreds of feet to jumbled rock. Presently the old Zuni reappeared bearing several reatas, which he nimbly knotted into a long rope. Other Indians grasped it, and the old man started down the slide.

When the Zuni reached the judge he looped the rope round his body below the arms and with one arm helped him up. With the judge clinging with his good hand beside the darker hand of the Zuni and the Indian's arm round his body, the men above hauled in slowly, and the two walked up the slope, much as a Kanaka walks up the side of a ship, when given a rope to hold by.

Judge Cozzens says in his memoirs that his slide ripped and wore clothing and skin to shreds, and that a broken bone gave him acute pain; but the rescue and the tender care given him made him appreciate the vast difference between the Apache, whom he had fought, and the pueblo Indians, who are essentially men of peace.—Youth's Companion.

MADAME LE BRUN.

Was a French artiste, or painter, who gained considerable reputation in Paris. Her paintings, historical pieces as well as portraits, were exhibited in the Louvre. Madame de Genlis speaks of the talents of Madame le Brun with much warmth of praise, and complains that the men "sought to deprecate her paintings because she was a woman."

CALGARY.

The first meeting of the town council of the newly-incorporated town of Calgary was held forty years ago today, December 4, 1884. The young metropolis of Alberta, and future mecca of thousands of tourists from the States, was then a collection of rude huts with less than 500 population—which in three decades increased to 100,000. In 1881 Calgary consisted principally of the Hudsons' Bay Co.'s store and the barracks of the Northwest Mounted The first train reached Calgary from Winnipeg in 1883, and three years later a through train from Montreal passed through the town. In 1894 it was incorporated as a city. The first settlement of whites in the vicinity of the present city was at Fort La Jonquirre, which was built by the French in 1752. For a century the Province of Alberta, in common with all Western Canada was considered worthless for agricultural purposes. The history of Calgary is the history of the development of one of the richest wheat countries in the world today.

FIRST AMERICAN DRAMA.

The first drama written and produced in North America was the work of Thomas Godfrey, who was born in Philadelphia 188 years ago today, December 4, 1736. He attained wide fame as a poet and in 1759 he wrote "The Prince of Parthia," a tragedy, the first dramatic work in English written in the New World. His play was privately produced, as public dramatic performances were then frowned upon by the authorities of most American communities, in fact, as late as 1792. Shakespeare's works had to be produced under the guise of "moral lectures," much as the New York vaudeville theatres formerly evaded the Sunday law by calling the performances on the first day of the week "Sacred Concerts"—this of course before the "Movie" had usurped the center of the stage—or rather screen—with such brilliant performances as "Why Girls Leave Home" and "The Scarlet Sin," etc. etc. Godfrey died in Wilmington, N. C in 1763.

The next play written and acted in America was the work of Burgoyne, the British commander in the Revolution, and was entitled the "Blockade of Boston." It was staged in Boston and during the performance a sergeant dashed in, crying "The Rebels have attacked the lines on the neck." His spirited delivery was swildly applauded and some minutes elapsed before the audience realized that this was not a part of the play. The first professional dramatist in America was William Dunlap, who was one of the most fertile of early playwrights.

JOHNSON HONORED BY FIVE NATIONS

Bolsherik battles, a czar of all the Russias murdered with his family in a lonely provincial town, the historic retreat of Czechoslovak forces from western Russia to the Pacific, clash after clash for five months with German and Austrian war prisoners and Russian Reds, cold, hunger, the slow withdrawal of allied troops with all the hardships of panic, food shortage, and broken down transportation—all of these, woven together into the story of Col. B O. Johnson, Legionnaire, make of it a veritable Arabian Nights tale.

Colonel Johnson, now resident at St Paul, Minn., but formerly of Livingston, Mont., was appointed chairman of the transportation committee for the national convention of the American Legion He is a vice president of the Northern Pacific railroad.

In the fall of 1917 Colonel Johnson went to Siberia as a member of a railway engineers' outfit to move military supplies from Vladivostok on the Pacific to the Russian front Finding that the front was collapsing, he was sent with a few other American engineers to learn conditions. After 5,000 miles across north Asia, they learned that Russia was out of it and helped to move 50,000 Czechoslovaks, Serbs and Rumanians across Siberia to Vladivostok. For five months they battled with 600,000 enemy prisoners of war, aided by the Reds The prisoners were returned to camps, the Trans-Siberian railroad was controlled and a way opened into Austria.

Colonel Johnson was with the Czechs as they surrounded Ekaterinburg, while Czar Nicholas and his family were prisoners there He interviewed many Russians who were in the city when the imperial family was murdered. He got at first hand a story of the assassination, which appeared in the press. He is one of a few Americans who have stood in the very room where the last of the Romanoffs, who ruled Russia for 300 years, met his fate.

After the armistice in 1918, Colonel Johnson, with American, British, Japanese and Chinese engineers was placed in charge of the Trans-Siberian railroad to transport supplies to Admiral Kolchak in his battle against the Bolshevik government. Kolchak swept on to within 200 miles of Moscow. Then the break came. After a decisive defeat on the Volga, Kolchak's forces were routed.

A great evacuation movement from European Russia set in, as the Bolsheviki pushed on into western and central Siberia. Colonel Johnson and a few American and British engineers between Oursk and the front had charge of transportation of the retreating army. In September, 1919, they passed 45 trains eastward per day. Winter came on, demoralization grew, typhoid fever, smallpox and starvation added to their terrors. All allied forces were ordered out. On November 12, Colonel Johnson left Oursk with the last allied train and the Reds moved in the next day.

Five months later the last trains dragged into Vladivostok after as terrible a winter as military forces have ever known. Locomotives broke down, food was lacking, disease raged, panic and demoralization reigned, coal mines were abandoned. Bolsherik forces hampered and hindered. Five months went by in that journey of 4,500 miles. This ended allied intervention in Siberia.

All left but the Japanese. They chose to remain and the bodies for co-ordination of allied efforts continued. Colonel Johnson stayed on for two years, having under his control American-trained Chinese and Japanese engineers So much was accomplished in restoring the traffic on the Trans-Siberian that Colonel Johnson was decorated by the President of China and the emperor of Japan, as he had been by the French President and by Serbia.

PERMANENT WORLD PEACE, CHIEF AIM

With three Americans holding the highest honors, the Interallied War Veterans' association is ready this year to launch a big program to make itself felt in all international movements seeking permanent world peace.

Thomas W. Miller, former alien property custodian, is president; Roy Hoffman of Oklahoma, is American vice president, and Mrs. Lowell F. Hobart is first women's organizer of the association auxiliary. Including the newly armed auxiliary, the Fidac, as it is called, embraces a membership of 15,000,000 ex-service men and women of the world, and what they do or say this year will have reactions in all the capitals of the civilized world.

The first achievement of record is the announcement by the League of Nations that a section has been reserved for ex-service men While not permitted to vote in the league's councils this section will be consulted in veteran questions and on matters of world peace. What it actually means is that next June when the disarmament conference is held at Geneva, Switzerland, the World war veterans will be represented and their influence felt.

Arrangements for a periodical publication, creation of a propaganda bureau and insistence that the international president visit all the member countries at least once during his regime were other questions settled at the recent fifth annual congress held in London.

The member countries include France, Great Britain, Belgium, Italy, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Yugo-Slavia, United States, Rumania.

The one ideal of the Fidac is the bringing about of permanent world peace.

Its members having felt war, Colonel Miller, the president, said it has no intention of allowing questions affecting international amity to be discussed without the representation of the veterans. President Miller plans to make extensive speaking tours in member nations and, in a word, concretely express the policies laid down at the last congress. He plans to sail for Europe in December to remain for the remainder of his administration.

Has Seventeen Members —Population Only Ten

There's an American Legion post at Bull Head, S. D., "Barney Brought" post, with a genealogy longer than a giraffe's neck. And speaking of necks, the forebears of members of the post have been cavorting around this neck of the woods, in these past five centuries and more. They're all full-blooded Sioux Indians, all 17 of them. Twelve of the 17 braves fought overseas in the World war, where they proved that the term "brave," as applied to men of their blood, is no misnomer, for several of them were cited for gallantry in action.

The fourth dimension, perpetual motion, the music of the spheres have not been solved at this writing, but members of Barney Brought post had solved an equally puzzling phenomenon in that they have pushed the membership of the post to 17, although the total population of Bull Head is ten persons. The mystic necromancy of their forefathers is not responsible for the seemingly impossible in this case, but rather the hard-riding expeditions far into the brush country which have yielded the members above par in membership.

Thomas C. Necklace, a member of the post, was recently elected department historian, and when he isn't busy with the official duties of his office whiles away the leisure hours with Virgil, Shakespeare and Darwin; he is a Carlisle graduate.

Slow in Filing Claims for Government Bonus

According to information furnished American Legion officials by Maj Gen Robert G Davis adjutant general of the army and in charge of the machinery of handling the federal bonus claims, only 1,300,000 applications out of a possible 4,500,000 had been received up to October 1, 1924 Of the applications received 850,000 had been examined and about 400,000 passed and certificates for the amounts due forwarded to the Veterans' bureau, which will make payments or otherwise compensate as the law provides. General Davis declared in regard to the apathetic attitude displayed by veterans in filing their applications: "It is imperative from the standpoint of economy in administration that those veterans who intend to avail themselves eventually of the benefits conferred by the Adjusted Compensation act should make their application now."

Service Men May Obtain "Northwest Angle" Land

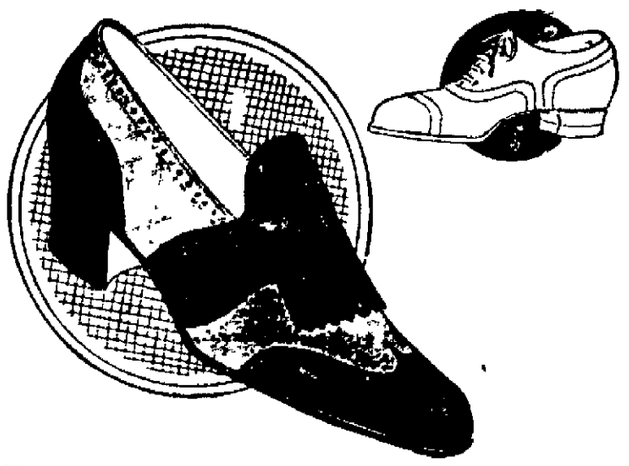

According to advices sent from the United States land office to the state department of the American Legion of Minnesota, the "Northwest Angle," that section of Minnesota that juts up north from the international boundary in the Lake of the Woods region, is to be settled soon. The land office has asked the Legion to call attention to preferential rights of service men in filing on the land. Service men with the colors 10 months can prove up with seven months' residence whereas those with no military record must live on the land three years. The "Northwest Angle" consists largely of timber land, some of which is said to have considerable value. Filings are made at the United States land office, Crookston, Minn.

Casts Doubt on Legend

The summit of Mount Ararat was first reached by Professor Parrot in 1829 after two unsuccessful attempts. In 1850 another expedition carried a great cross to the summit, which was attained after untold of dangers and privation above the snow line. The cross was finally erected. On another occasion, after spending days and nights in the snows on precipitous cliffs, an explorer named Khodzko decided that the climbing was so difficult that the descent of the steep slope would have proved fatal to many of the animals of the ark."

"INDIVIDUALITY OF DRESS"

"Sports" Shoe Need Not Imply Clumsiness and Awkward Lines

Many a well-dressed woman dreads wearing sports shoes because she feels that to be comfortably shod her feet must appear awkwardly out of proportion As a matter of fact, the sports shoe need not be any larger than the street shoe in appearance if the shoe simulates the lines of the heavier shoe but is made of more flattering materials. The shoe illustrated has a Scotch tongue and flat heel and usually comes in combinations of beige and tan or gray and black. A shoe of this type comes in the sports shoe classification, but has a grace and daintiness all its own.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

COPYRIGHT BY WESTERN NEWSPAPER UNION

SLUSH PUDDING

During the day it had been cloudy. Then it had rained. But at the end of the day there was a red sky and a beautiful sunset.

Behind the buildings Mr. Sun went down to bed, and looking over the spires and houses he said to the Sunset Fairies:

"You're looking very handsome this evening, but why not make it an evening of changing costumes?"

The Sunset Fairies love to dress up, so they did as Mr. Sun suggested.

They wore lovely dresses of pale blue and then they changed to dresses that were deep blue. Others wore purple and some wore scarlet and some wore white, fluffy, fleecy costumes that looked as though they could float through the air—which of course they could do. They kept changing their costumes constantly, too.

The people down on the earth said:

"It looked today as though we were in for a little rainy weather, but now the sky is so brilliant perhaps it is going to clear off."

"We'll fool them," laughed the King of the Clouds.

"We'll fool them," said the Army of Raindrops.

"We'll fool them," said the Mist grandchildren.

"We'll fool them," said Nurse Fog.

"Indeed, we will," said the Old Weather Man.

"And we'll fool them," said the Snowflake children.

"Are you going to come, too?" the others asked.

"Indeed, we are," said the Snowflake children. "We've had a long enough sleep.

"We feel like getting up now."

So the next day it rained a little and there was quite a good deal of mist and fog.

And then the snowflake children came along.

The people were astonished.

"The first snow of the season," they said.

"Well, it does look as though winter had just about arrived," some of the others said.

"Do look at the snow," some shouted.

But the children were quite delighted. While some were grumbling,

The Children Were Quite Delighted.

they were ready to enjoy the snow and the rain. There were not many of the Snowflake children about.

Some of them had turned over and gone to sleep again. But there were enough to make a nice amount of slush.

"Let's have slush pudding for lunch," cried Peter Gnome. The Gnomes were in Fairyland watching the snow and the rain—they were just a little distance from where the people were.

"All right," said the Queen of the Fairies.

"All right," said the other Fairies.

They set to work at once.

They made the most delicious slush pudding. If ever you want to make it, this is the recipe:

Take a generous amount of rain water and mix with as much light snow as you can get.

Stir well and mix thoroughly. Put aside in a cool place, yet not too cool, for freezing must be avoided in order that the nice slushy mixture remain.

Then season with baby icicles and serve.

Of course, you may not want to eat the pudding, but it is fun to make it, anyway.

As the Gnomes and the Brownies and the Fairies and the members of the Oaf family and the members of the Bogey family, Old Mr. Giant and Witty Witch sat around the banquet board and ate the slush pudding, they sang, too.

This was their song:

Slush pudding, slush pudding.
Oh, slush, slush, slush.
Some would call you
Nothing but mush!

But to us you're good,
For Fairyland food
Is different, you know.
Neigh-ho!!!
Neigh-ho!!!

Persuasion

A five-year-old who had been permitted to play with a neighbor's dog recently acquired an animal of her own. "Now," she announced with satisfaction, "I have a dog of my own—and not just a step-dog."

Could Locate Cities

Now they tell of the boy who was asked to locate several large cities on the map. His answer was: "I can't locate them, but I know how to tune in on every one."

Moral Independence

What other folks may say to you frequently has more influence than what conscience dictates to be our duty. It would be better if more of us were true to ourselves regardless of how we may appear to our friends. Moral independence is a valuable asset.—Ada.

GAS BUGGIES—What Some of Us Will Never Know.

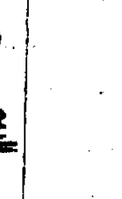

THE KITCHEN CABINET

(©, 1924, Western Newspaper Union.)

The man who try to do something and fail are infinitely better than those who try to do nothing and succeed.—Lloyd Jones.

GOOD THINGS YOU WILL LIKE

Here is a pudding that you will enjoy when the cool days whet the appetite for rich food:

Grateful Pudding.—To a pound of flour add a pound of white bread crumbs, finely grated. Take eight eggs, but half of the whites; beat well and mix with a pint of new milk. Sift in the bread and flour, a half pound each of raisins and currants, one-half pound of sugar, and a little minced candied ginger. Mix well, pour into a baking dish and bake until firm. Cream instead of milk will make a much richer pudding.

Philadelphia Pepper Pot.—Wash a small knuckle of veal, slice one large onion and cover both with three quarts of cold water and place on the back of the range and let slowly come to the boiling point. Simmer for several hours, then strain and set away to cool. Skim free from fat, add two potatoes cut into dice, a pound of cooked tripe, cut into small pieces, half a bay leaf, a few sprays of parsley chopped fine, and the meat from the veal joint cut into small pieces and freed from gristle. Boil slowly just long enough to cook the potatoes, then season to taste with salt, pepper, and thicken with a heaping tablespoonful each of flour and butter rubbed to a paste. Add dumplings or noodles to the soup and serve.

Schnitz and Knep.—Soak a pint or more of sun-dried apples over night; these are the schnitz in the morning; place a ham bone on which there is some meat in cold water to cover and simmer for an hour; then add the soaked, drained apples and cook until they are very tender. Sprinkle with a little brown sugar to make slightly sweet and continue to simmer another ten minutes or more. Now the knep, which are very nice dumplings, are prepared thus: Beat two eggs well, one cupful of sweet milk, a pinch of salt, a tablespoonful of melted butter and a teaspoonful of baking powder sifted with enough flour to make a stiff batter. Drop by teaspoonfuls into the boiling schnitz and cover closely, cooking ten minutes without removing the cover. Serve in a deep dish with the apples and liquor over the dumplings.

Esperanto's Prospects

Although stress has been placed on the encouraging spread of Esperanto, it is not possible for the average person to believe that a universal tongue, absolutely artificial in its origin, ever will attain general use, or even make enough progress to facilitate understanding among the peoples of different speech. It is much more probable that English will become the most widely spoken of all modern languages. However, it is pleasant to know that the Esperantans have as their aim the universal brotherhood and there is no doubt that their work will have a reconciling, harmonizing effect wherever it is introduced.—The Argonaut.

Three Immigrants Watched

A number of our standard trees are importations from distant corners of the world. Some specimens were brought in years ago by seafarers who, admiring a tree's beauty, would bring home a young shoot and try to make it grow. Other specimens were imported from England and southern Europe to grace estates of wealthy men. Such chance methods of introducing a tree would be too slow now, and too haphazard. Every immigrant tree must prove its healthiness at a port of entry lest it bring in a disease as dreadful as the San Jose scale or the chestnut blight.

Jewels That Keep Time

A watch movement contains precious stones to diminish its wear. The lever and the balance wheel pivots all have fine holes in bearings made out of rubies. In high-grade watches all bearings of the entire watch movement are jeweled. The best grade jewels are made of sapphires or rubies, the cheaper grade of garnet, and the lowest grade of ordinary rock crystal. There are from seven to twenty-three points of jewels in a watch, and whether they are all of good quality and if the wheel pivots perfectly the watch will be a good timekeeper even if it does run.

Buick Continues its Leadership

For the seventh consecutive year Buick has first choice of space at the National Automobile Shows. This signal honor is awarded annually by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to the manufacturer-member having the largest volume of business for the preceding twelve months.

In winning and in maintaining this enviable position year after year, Buick has demonstrated conclusively that the true value of any automobile is reflected in the consistency with which the public buys it.

Since the introduction of the 1925 Buick models, public patronage has increased to an even greater degree—

A tribute to the Buick engineering skill and manufacturing ability that have provided newer and better Buick cars without departing in any way from the fundamentals of power, economy and dependability for which all Buicks have been famous.

WHEN CUTTING GRASS WAS A REAL HAZARD

This armored car is used for cutting the grass on the crowded municipal links at Lincoln park, near San Francisco, Cal. The car had to be screened since it became necessary to cut the grass while the links were in use and no driver would risk the job without this protection. With the heavy screen the car is the target many times for the players.

ROAD COURTESY IS OFTEN NEGLECTED

Many Little Things Make Motor Traveling Most Difficult on Highways.

(By ERWIN GREER President Greer College of Automotive Engineering Chicago.)

When you are driving along a road and someone approaching from behind sounds his horn to pass let him do so

Many times when driving along the highway you may have noticed drivers give the signal to the car ahead and try to pass only to have the car on the right hand side speed up

Jangle's Driver's Nerves.

It certainly jangles a drivers' nerves when he finds the car ahead speeding up when he attempts to go by There is no excuse for this sort of thing If you want to pass, why should the man on the right step on the throttle and attempt to block you?

There is plenty of courtesy to be observed on the road besides mere theory If we were more thoughtful of the other fellow, motoring would be a lot more pleasant

Not Watching Road.

The other day a motorist reported that he was coming from Gary and was crossing the railroad tracks in South Chicago. There is a right angle turn there and it is dangerous unless low speed is maintained. Coming around the turn a boy was observed driving a delivery wagon. He was taking about all the room to be had on the highway and when this motorist looked at him he found the chap was busily engaged in reading a letter and was not watching the road at all

It is just such things as this instance that makes motor traveling hard and troublesome. If motorists would drive sanely there would be fewer disasters on the highways.

Remove Scratches From Car Body With Shellac

A car owner naturally takes pride in the finish of a new car and endeavors to retain its mirror-like luster as long as possible. But when work must be done on the car the finish often suffers. Often a button will scratch its way along a fender or the slipping of a screwdriver will leave an unsightly blemish A method which has often given satisfaction, says the Automobile Digest, is to apply several coats of thin shellac until the scratch has been completely filled When the last coat has dried it is rubbed with crocus cloth and a little olive oil just enough to rub out the ridges where the new and old coats join

Crocus cloth, used extensively by jewelers, is a polishing cloth of a much finer grade than the finest emery cloth and will rub down a surface without the semblance of a scratch. After no signs remain of where the two coats join a rub down with a good body polish will render the touch-up inconspicuous and restore the surface to its orginal appearance

Plan to Keep Windshield Clear in Moist Weather

It is always annoying when at the last moment one is in a hurry to take up a meal or coming from out of doors into a warmer temperature, to find the lenses of one's glasses suddenly clouded with steam.

Prevent this by washing the glasses perfectly clean. Dry them on a soft cloth, and then rub with a cloth which has been moistened with a very small amount of paraffin oil. All that is needed is the thinnest film to coat the surface, yet not enough to attract dust. This coating prevents the moisture touching the glass. It is convenient to have a cloth ready prepared. The same plan is excellent to keep the windshield of the automobile clear in damp weather.

Carbon and Compression

European automobile race drivers are experimenting with pistons that are raised and rounded at the top. They call this dunting the pistons and find that it increases compression and power by forcing the gas vapor to occupy a smaller space when compressed. This is exactly what happens in the next to motor fouls on a small scale when carbon cakes on the piston tops But the carbon prevents the gas and thus wastes power, hence increases it

Refilling Pressure Type of Grease Gun Is Easy

Refilling the pressure type of grease gun, such as is used in conjunction with modern lubrication systems on automobiles, is a slow and tedious procedure as well as disagreeable because of the amount of grease that is deposited on the hands during the process.

An improved method of filling which was devised by a Washington (D C) motorist, is illustrated It is simple enough to warrant adoption by any motorist who objects to having to fill the gun with his fingers or a stick, and is also a quicker method.

The filler is simple, a flat strip of sheet metal, fitted with a wooden handle on the upper end. The blade part passes through a slot in a cap that is of the right size to fit the grease-gun barrel The handle, blade, and cap may be made of any available materials such as a file handle, a strip of galvanized iron, and a metal can top.

In operation the filler is inserted in the can of grease and turned continuously while it is being pulled out. The grease in the shape of a cylinder adheres to the sides of the strip The filler then is placed in the grease gun, the cap is pushed down over the barrel, and the blade is slipped out, thus leaving the contents inside the gun.—Popular Science Monthly

Bad Plugs Cause Missing and Jerking of Motors

There are few things more annoying to the motorist than a missing, skipping motor. Besides the certainty that this condition is imposing a serious strain upon the engine, clutch, transmission and the rest of the propelling system of the car, due to the irregularity of the power impulses it means increased gasoline and oil consumption and carbonized cylinders. Too frequently motorists are prone to suspect the carburetor and start to tinker with the adjustments, when, as a matter of fact, there is nothing the matter with the mixture The whole trouble may be due to uneven spark gaps, caused either by bending the electrodes unintentionally in removing or cleaning the plugs and sometimes in replacing them, or by the points becoming pitted to such an extent that the gap is materially widened. By spacing the gap so that there is a space of one thirty-second of an inch between the actual firing surfaces of the two points this condition may be quickly and easily corrected.

Dangers of Carbon Monoxide

One of the dangers not commonly known to automobile owners is that from carbon monoxide, a deadly gas given off from the exhaust pipe. Because of the fact that many automobile campers build their tent as a part of their automobile, they should know the danger that exists from this odorless, colorless gas Never run the engine of your automobile without making sure that you are receiving plenty of fresh air. The best rule to follow is never to run the engine in any inclosed place, for any length of time.

An Improvised Pipe Vise

A pipe cannot be held securely in the ordinary type of bench vise, as the jaws permit only a single line contact on each side of the pipe By using a monkey wrench, with the jaws placed along the axis of the pipe, the effect produced is almost the same as that of a pipe vise. The wrench should be set so that it bears on the pipe only on the edges of the jaws.

Make Ring Spreader

An efficient piston ring spreader can be made from one-quarter-inch round stock with one-half of each piece hammered flat and the ends bent, says the Automobile Digest. The two ends are bolted or riveted together and when inserted in the ring slot will permit spreading the ring so that it can be removed over the head of the piston.

Reginald Denny

This popular "movie" actor began his career on the legitimate stage. He was born in England and embarked on a theatrical career on leaving college. He came to America and starred in a number of road shows. The war took him back to his native land and he became noted as a boxer in the Royal Air force. After the war he returned as a musical comedy baritone, later being induced by a prominent producer to enter motion pictures.

Through the Glad Eyes of a Woman

By Jane Doe

OUR NOSEGAY GIRLS

I WAS dilly-dallying alongside the beauty counters of a big store the other morning, treating my susceptible nose to all the fine airs which blow round these parts.

And it occurred to me that the fashionable young woman of today, judging from the amount of money she hands over those popular counters, must be a sort of animated pot-pourri of all the most delicious scents that ever blew across Araby, or—er—the perfumier's laboratory.

Her toilet from her hour of awakening until she lays a tired head on the pillow of forgetfulness is surely just one delicate aroma after another.

She is very liberal, you observe, with the lilac bath salts, and she dries herself on warm towels from a linen cupboard that is smelly with sweet verbena. After that she powders with a gigantic puff.

Her teeth she cleans with a paste tasty with wintergreen and likes a mouth-wash flavored with peppermint.

She washes her face in waters that are faintly milky with tincture of benzoin, which is not unlike sweet almonds to the nose, and bathes the sleep out of her eyes with eyecups of rose water.

Her hair has to be anointed with a trifle of jasmine brilliantine, and she touches up her lips with a stick that reminds you of cherry.

Over her cheeks and neck she puffs a rachel or naturelle cloud of some delicate powder that can be quite intoxicatingly like a wild rose, or a suggestion of honeysuckle after a shower of rain, or a nodding violet.

Maybe it is a dance night.

Another bath—now with mustard in it. She creams her neck and arms, and wipes it all off with a California poppy toilet water.

She uses her best perfume, which is very alluring and baffles description.

And she goes forth, rustling in silk or taffeta, with the aroma of the looms of far China or Japan still clinging to them.

And we don't see her any more until she comes back with her feet like bits of hot lead, white shoulders that ache with the shimmy-ague, and a head that feels as if it's going to burst.

But she is not too tired to wipe off all that powder and lip-salve and cosmetique with plain, homely cold cream, or spray her pillow with refreshing eau de cologue.

Oh, very nice!

And how grateful we should be for our nosegay girls.

Let us salute them.

A LINE O' CHEER

By John Kendrick Bangs.

WHY?

WHY yield up to despair,
Surrendering to care,
With tears and downcast eye,
When in the morning sky
The glorious sun of cheer
Is shining bright and clear,
And shedding on your way
The golden light of day
To lead you from your stress
Out of the wilderness
If you but seize the gold
The flying minutes hold?

Evidently Much Moved

A little girl returned home to her parents, after sitting for her school musical examination. They asked her how she had got on.

"Very well, I think," she answered.

"What was the examiner like?"

"Quite a nice man—and so religious."

"Religious! How could you tell?"

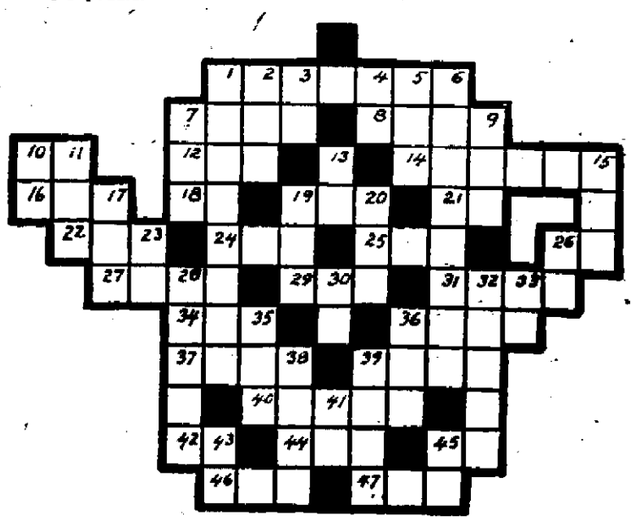

"In the middle of one of my pieces he put his head in his hands and said, 'Oh, heavens! Oh, heavens!' very reverently."

Laugh and the world laughs with you, weep and people will say that your tears are glycerin.—Boston Transcript.

What could please the children more—than these funny Aunt Jemima Rag Dolls —and lots of real Aunt Jemima Pancakes?

Special offer—now!

How children love rag dolls! What real playthings they are! And they love old Aunt Jemima too! Here's a chance to give them a double treat at surprisingly little cost.

For twenty-five cents and the top of a package of Aunt Jemima Pancake Flour or Prepared Buckwheat Flour, we will be glad to send you the four jolly Aunt Jemima Rag Dolls, shown above, by return mail, postage paid. They are printed in bright colors, all ready to cut out and stuff.

Then serve the children some real Aunt Jemima Pancakes with the old-time plantation flavor. Watch the surprise and pleasure in their eyes when they first taste them!

Send for the dolls

Let the kiddies have the dolls this Christmas. Ask your grocer today for a package of Aunt Jemima Pancake Flour or Aunt Jemima Prepared Buckwheat Flour. Then cut or tear off the top of either one and mail it with twenty-five cents (wrapped so that the coins won't cut the envelope) and with your name and address, plainly written or printed, to—

Cameron Beck At High School

Wednesday morning Cameron Beck, director of the personne' department of the New York Stock Exchange, addressed the high school student body at the regular assembly.

The keynote of Mr. Beck's speech was "What you are to be, you are now becoming." During his speech Mr Beck stated that he addressed many audiences, but he never addresses a more important group than the high school students, for in the high schools there are future David Livingstones and Florence Nightingales. "The decisions we make today are mighty important in our tomorrow." Mr. Beck also said that the hardest person any business concern has to deal with today is the person you can't tell anything. He emphasized that the tardy worker is being discounted financially in the business world today.

A FLOWER AS THE ONLY ORNAMENTATION.

(By Eleanor Gunn.)

The chiffon velvet frock is being starred this season. Some of the smartly costumed plays of the year have their leading women dressed in velvet. In one, a regal star wears white velvet on closely draped lines, with a bit of rhinestone embroidery at the hip; in another, a periwinkle chiffon velvet frock chez Chanel is worn, and has been extensively copied. Another smart comedy seems to go in for buttercup and all shades of yellow velvet—and so it goes.

The model sketched is of chiffon weight orchid velvet—scarf, tiers, ruffles and all. Even women who plan to go south immediately after the holidays are including velvet in their wardrobe. Why not, since fur is not excluded. A lovely gold lace model intended for Palm Beach wear had a narrow border of kolinsky around the edge, and the top, of gold net, covered with a vermicelli design in coral. The dress was originally made over a black satin slip, but it was decided that it was more effective over coral or gold. All sorts and conditions of frocks, from exquisitely embroidered batiste to gold lace are made over black slips, blonde and beige being particularly smart.

The modern velvet gown is, of course, unlined, and since it is chiffon weight, there is no reason why it should not be worn in the southlands.

A cluster of flowers or a single flower on the shoulder is highly approved just now. On a model in two tones of fuchsia which joined at the knee line, crystal beading softening the line, two large cabbage roses were added to the left side where a godet unexpectedly occurred. It sometimes develops that a single flower is balanced on the hem of the frock.

Makers of Dynamite Can Take No Chances

When one approaches a factory where dynamite is made everything seems half asleep. Here and there among the scattered buildings a man may be seen slowly wheeling a rubber-tired vehicle that looks not unlike a baby carriage. He exercises the greatest care, for his load is nitroglycerin, which does not allow mistakes to happen twice. The workmen and these strange carts are used to take the nitroglycerin from the mixing room to the refinery for the alternate straining and testing it must undergo until its detonating qualities are perfected. When the dynamite has been strained and the sulphuric acid removed from it the foreman takes half a teaspoonful of the liquid, spreads it thin on a metal surface and then strikes it with a hammer. When he is satisfied the product is shipped along to the dynamite building, where the nitroglycerin is soaked up by porous clay and cut in convenient sticks for mine use. The dynamite when pressed into shape is tested out by the explosion of a small amount on a ballistic pendulum. This device has a heavy lead ball mounted on the end of a swinging arm, which is set in motion by the force of the explosion. The gage tells the amount of motion and from this the power of the dynamite is calculated.

Word "Sleet" Used to Convey Many Meanings

The word "sleet" has three distinct meanings in the English-speaking world, says Nature Magazine. In England it is nearly always applied to a mixture of snow and rain, and the same usage prevails to some extent in this country.

Again, a great many Americans, including most engineers, have long applied the name "sleet" to the smooth coating of ice, due to rain falling in cold weather spot or sleet envelops the branches, wires and other objects and gives us the beautiful spectacle of the "ice storm." British meteorologists call this "glazed frost," our weather bureau has coined for it the name "glaze," and on both sides of the Atlantic it has sometimes been known as "silver thaw."

Lastly, the "sleet" of weather bureau usage is widely so called in America, and sometimes so called in Great Britain. A few British meteorologists have tentatively styled it "ice rain," but this name has never become established.

In view of these facts, it is a safe forecast that the term "sleet" is destined to create meteorologists more worry in years to come than the term "cyclone"—which most people still misapply to the tornado—has caused for many years past.

AWARDED GOLD MEDAL at Panama Pacific International Exposition as best kerosene (coal oil) Lamp, in competition with the world's best. Government Bureau of Standards and 25 leading universities have tested and approved the Aladdin.

BETTER LIGHT

At LESS EXPENSE from COAL OIL (Kerosene)

This wonderful new incandescent mantle lamp gives more than ten times as much light as the common coal oil lamp. At the same time it burns less than half as much oil as the old style open flame, center draught lamps. Beats electric, gasoline or acetylene. The new

Aladdin Table Lamp

the most reliable incandescent mantle oil lamp ever

For evening reading, writing or sewing there is no light that can compare with the powerful, steady, white light of the Aladdin. Safe, durable, economical, no noise, no odor. Women and children operate it with ease. You can't appreciate the great difference between the light of this lamp and the common coal oil lamp 'til you see it. It has all the good qualities of the high priced systems but with the advantage of being as simple as the ordinary coal oil lamp.

LET US DEMONSTRATE IT TO YOU

You'll never want to go back to the dingy, ruddish, flickering light of your old style lamps. You can have the most cheerful and best lighted home in your neighborhood by getting an Aladdin Table Lamp. Save your eyesight by using this white light. There are also other Aladdin styles such as hanging lamps, bracket lamps, etc. TRIAL FREE.

City Prepares For Winter Snow

Board of Public Works Decides to Purchase a Barber-Greene Snow Loader and Brockway Truck Equipped With Snow Plow for $11,850.

The board of public works at an adjourned session held Wednesday evening at the city hall decided to purchase a Barber-Greene snow loader at a cost of $5,600, and a Brockway truck equipped with a snow plow at a cost of $6,250. The new equipment, together with the equipment now on hand, will place the board in a position to remove the snow from the streets much more rapidly than in former years.

The meeting room Wednesday night again looked like a convention hall of traveling salesmen in session, and before the meeting opened at 8 o'clock Mayor Morris Block, who presided, informed the various representatives of show removal equipment that they would be given an hour to speak. Those who took advantage of the opportunity were the same men who spoke at the meeting last week.

After hearing from all of the representatives present the board went into executive session to discuss the matter. The snow loader ordered the board has been on the market several years and is the best known make of loader now sold. The city of Albany has several of the loaders, and they have worked most successfully.

The Brockway truck equipped with a snow plow is used extensively in Watervliet and vicinity to keep the streets and roads open, and the board believes that with the present equipment on hand and the new truck and plow that it will be possible to keep the main streets open to traffic all winter. The board already has two Brockway trucks which have done good work since they were purchased.

Fishermen Who Have No Use for Hook and Lin

The negroes of Jamaica have an unique method of getting fish. They go out on a calm moonlight night and row about until they notice a spot where the water is ruffled. This means that a shoal of red snapper is on the surface.

Rowing to the spot one of the men begins beating on the side of the boat with a wooden club. The fish are terrified and jump high into the air, and some at least are sure to fall into the boat. From a dozen to twenty may be caught out of one shoal, and since these are big fish, weighing from two to five pounds apiece, the take is well worth having.

The writer has seen mullet taken in similar fashion off the Florida coast. The boat, however, went out on a dark night and was provided with a strong flare in the bows. Then the surface of the water was beaten with the oar blades and the mullet jumped in scores, quite a number falling in the boat nets stretched to receive them.

Writing With a "Hill"

How many people would associate the word "pencil" with a peak or a headland?

The word is derived from the nature of the districts where slate is quarried, for the earliest pencils on record were made from slate. The word "pen" denotes a headland on the coast, or a peak in the country, and it is from these old rock formations that the material is quarried. In this way we find such names as Penrith, Penmaenmawr, the Pendines, and Pentonce, all of which have at one time or another been actively associated with the slate industry.

In the manufacture of the modern "lead" pencils, the plumbago from which the writing portion is made is also quarried in these regions.—London Mail.

COTTEKILL.

Cottekill, Dec. 4.—A hot roast pork supper will be served in the new social room just completed of the Cottekill Reformed Church on Wednesday evening, December 10. Supper will be served from 5:30 and continue until all are served. The menu will consist of hot roast pork, brown gravy, dressing, mashed potatoes, turnips, baked beans, cranberry sauce, pickles, celery, white and brown bread, cake tea and coffee. Home made candy and ice cream will be on sale, also a large number of packages for a parcel post sale. A social invitation is extended to the public to attend. There will be plenty of seating capacity in the new social room and the people will be served more rapidly and more at a seating than at the suppers that were formerly held in the church building owing to more space in the new room. The proceeds are for the general operating expenses of the church organization.

FIGURES IN NORTH COUNTRY'S WORST CRIME

WILLIAMS CAMP & FOSTER FAMILY.

Simple Battery Charging Outfit

Method Which Will Give Satisfactory Service at Small Cost.

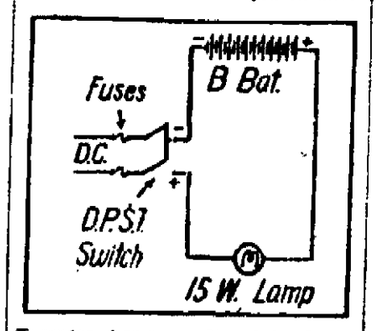

By J. L. RIFKIN

More and more storage B batteries are now coming into general use as fans are realizing that it is cheaper to buy a storage B battery once than new dry-cell B batteries every few months.

Many fans who have such storage B batteries, however, have some difficulty in charging them correctly.

If you have direct current lighting in your house charging your storage B battery is a very simple matter. The illustration shows how it is done. A 15-watt tungsten lamp is placed in series with the B battery and the battery is left "on charge" for about sixteen hours, or until the hydrometer readings show the battery to be fully charged. The exact charging time cannot be given, as it varies with the size or make of the particular battery.

If the house wiring is of the A. C. or alternating current type, a rectifier will be needed to convert the alternating current into direct current, since a battery cannot be charged on alternating current. This rectifier can be easily made by the fan at a very small cost.

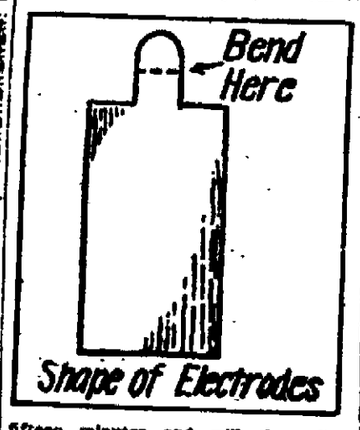

Tungsten Lamp Is Placed in Series With B Battery.

Get a mason jar or other wide-mouthed jar and fill it with water. Into this water dissolve pure borax powder until any added borax falls to the bottom of the jar without being dissolved. This solution is then said to be "saturated."

The plates for the rectifier are now made. These plates are simply a strip of aluminum and a strip of sheet lead. The ends of the plates are looped over the top of the jar and serve as connection posts.

One A. C. terminal is connected to the negative terminal of the battery. The positive terminal of the battery is then connected to the aluminum plate of the rectifier. The lead plate is connected to one terminal of a 25-watt tungsten lamp, the other terminal of the lamp going to the remaining A. C. terminal. The illustration will clear up any points you may not understand.

The first time the outfit is used the lamp will light up brightly for ten or fifteen minutes and will then dim. This does not mean that the charger is not working. On the contrary, it shows that the battery is charging correctly and that the rectifier is functioning properly.

A whitish deposit will be formed on the aluminum. This is formed by the electrolysis of the solution and should not be scraped off. The electrode will also be slowly eaten away by the action of the rectifier, but it can be easily replaced with a fresh plate whenever necessary.

If you wish to charge the battery at a quicker rate a 40-watt tungsten lamp is substituted for the 25 watt. The 25-watt lamp, however, will give a better charge and is to be preferred.

The B battery should be left to charge overnight or longer if necessary, about once a month. Do not neglect to replace used-up electrodes with fresh ones and to change the borax solution from time to time.

The writer believes this method of charging storage B batteries the simplest yet devised, giving good results. By its use one can be saved the expense of costly new dry-cell B batteries every once in a while. A fully charged B battery is also much more efficient and noiseless than the average dry-cell type of B battery after a few weeks of use.—New York Herald.

A Permanent Fixture

Curtiss Rich says in another generation automatic machines will displace stenographers in all offices. We don't believe it. As a piece of office furniture the stenographer is beyond the possibility of substitution.—Houston Post-Dispatch.

Old Note Valued as Curio

Calvin B. Hutchinson of Watertown, Mass., treasures a $7 bill as a curio. It was issued by the state of Massachusetts in May, 1780, under an act of the legislature, and payment was guaranteed by an act of congress of the same year. It was payable in Spanish milled dollars, with interest at 6 per cent from the time of issue.

Gold's Prank

A peculiar prank was played by a gale at the residence of George Nelson of a small New England town. One of the chimneys of the house was blown off, while a hole was blown clear through the other chimney without disturbing the top bricks.

Gas Tax Grossing

More than $500,000,000 is collected annually as gasoline taxes in the 35 states that require this revenue. The average tax is 2 cents, 12 states getting 1 cent a gallon and one, Arizona, levying 6 cents.

Pineapples Are Fed Iron

Iron is now being fed to pineapples in Hawaii and Porto Rico and is having the effect of enhancing the crops in those countries by millions of dollars, according to Engineering Foundation. Instead of the pure growth of yellow pineapples, it is giving them a healthy green look and big growth.

The spraying of sulphate iron began when research revealed that the yellowing of pineapples on the calcareous soils of Porto Rico was due to iron deficiency. As a result of the spraying Hawaii is producing 3,000,000 cases a year, as opposed to 2,300,000, the annual average until spraying began.

Man He Was Looking For

The young man was bragging of his many clever accomplishments, until one of the company in the boarding house lost his patience.

"Now, then," he said, "we've heard enough about what you can do. Come, tell us if there is anything you can't do, and I'll undertake to do it myself."

"Well," replied the other, with a yawn, "I can't pay the bill for my week's stay here. So glad to find you're the man to do it."

Origin of the Veil

No modern bride is "obliged" to wear a veil. The significance of the custom has quite died out. Originally it was worn because no man was supposed to see his wife until after his marriage with her, and the veil was the girl's protection until they were actually wedded.

UNION CENTER.

Union Center, Dec. 4.—At the annual election of officers for the Sunday school the following were elected to serve for one year: Superintendent, John Herring; assistant superintendent, R. G. Olin; lady superintendent, Mrs. J. Wells; assistant, Mrs. C. Warren; secretary, Marion Coutant; treasurer, Charles Warren; librarian, Allan Coutant; organist, Miss Harriet Eckert; assistants, Alice Olin and Marion Coutant. Miss Harriet Eckert, Mrs. Chester Wells, Mrs. R. G. Olin and Mrs. Joseph Wells have been appointed on the Christmas committee.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Rafferty, Jr., have returned home from their trip to Brooklyn.

The C. E. meeting next Sunday evening will be a consecration meeting. The topic will be, "In His Steps: 12. What Jesus Said About Forgiveness." Matt. 6:14; 18: 21-25. At this meeting offerings of foodstuff, etc., including money if any would rather give that, will be taken for the Industrial Home at Kingston. All are welcome.

The church service will be the communion service. At the recent church services the choir has been giving some special selections, which add greatly to the enjoyment of the service.

Mrs. W. J. Rand and daughter, Eva, spent Friday with Mrs. R. G. Olin.

Mrs. M. Cole and son, Alton, of Ulster Park called on Mrs. S. Coutant on Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Coutant returned home Sunday from a trip to Westfield, Mass., having spent Thanksgiving with Mrs. Coutant's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Mosher.

Miss Alice Olin was the week end guest of Miss Eva Rand at Kingston.

He laughed at Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

Now read this letter of thanks from Mr. Kane. It speaks for itself. Remember, it is because Kellogg's is ALL BRAN that it was so effective in his case—just as it has been in thousands of others. Only ALL BRAN can produce 100 per cent results.

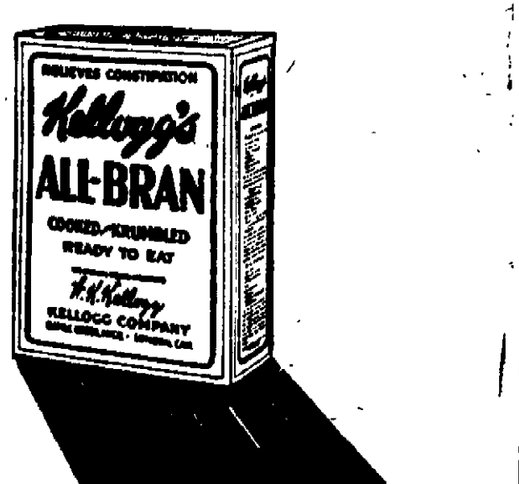

My dear friend:

Imagine a young man weighing 165 pounds in the course of a few months parked in bed, a weakling weighing 94 pounds. An elderly lady whom I knew since I was a kid paid me what she thought was a last visit. Upon being told of my plight she immediately recommended your product for such an ailment. Maybe some of us didn't look upon her views very lightly . . . it was to laugh!

My dear friend, I am still laughing . . . not at your product, but because I am able to. I am telling you and the world at large, "Eat Kellogg's Krumbled Bran!" It should be called "Constipation's worst enemy." I owe you my heartfelt gratitude. I can talk, and whenever the opportunity presents itself, my mouth is always full of bran—Kellogg's Krumbled. Wishing you countless days of progress, I am

Yours for success,
John M. Kane,
220 Salem St., Woburn, Mass.

Eat Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly to relieve constipation permanently. Two tablespoonfuls daily—in chronic cases, with every meal. It is guaranteed to bring results, or your grocer will return your money. You will like the delicious nut-like flavor. Sold by all grocers.

$175 Awarded Edward Mayer

Against John J. Hartley In Action Growing Out of Automobile Collision.

A verdict in the sum of $175 for plaintiff was returned by the jury which heard the evidence in the action brought by Edyard Mayer against John J. Hartley and Amelia Hartley, his mother, in the Supreme court Wednesday. The verdict, however, was against John J. Hartley, a motion made by Frank W. Brooks, attorney for defendants, dismissing the complaint as against Mrs. Hartley, having been granted by Judge Staley earlier in the case.

Mayer, driving a Dodge car valued at $225, was in collision with Hartley's Studebaker car, which was valued by witnesses at from $60 to $80. The accident happened near the Katrine garage on the Saugerties road. Mayer had just turned around and was coming toward Kingston. Hartley was proceeding out the Saugerties road on August 5, 1923, when the cars met.

The Mayer car was worth $50 after the accident, according to some of the witnesses. J. D. Schenck of the Van Motor Company, who sold the Dodge to Mayer, testified that the car was worth $225 before the accident and that it was not worth repairing afterward but had a nominal value as junk. The Studebaker, which had been purchased the day of the accident, was valued at from $60 to $80 before and $15 after the accident.

Mr. Hartley and his mother owned a Carnation car which was turned in in trade for the Studebaker car. The plates of the Carnation car were on the Studebaker car at the time of the accident. Mrs. Hartley was not in the car at the time and claimed no ownership in it. The court held that she was not involved in the case and granted the motion of Mr. Brooks dismissing the complaint in regard to her.

Stevenson No "Dandy"

"It is well known that Robert Louis had strange tastes in dress, but according to Mrs. R. L., it were better said that he had no taste at all; his dress was an accident, or, more correctly, a series of accidents. As he was consumptive, the doctors had told him—I fail to see why—that it was advisable to let his hair grow long; to the remainder of his appearance he never gave a thought. One day he was to be seen walking down Piccadilly in a strange colored mackintosh, and a very small straw hat with a pink ribbon, and at his heels a little crowd of jeering urchins, whose surprise was indeed great when a number of well-dressed men, having caught sight of him from the window, rushed down the steps of the Saville club and welcomed him with astonishing effusion.—From "My Years of Indiscretion," by Cyril Scott.

His First Experience

A young couple, recently married, had been riding with some friends. On reaching home the bride hurried the new husband up to the apartment with order to start the coffee boiling, while she made a few necessary purchases at a neighboring store. Her consternation at the absent-minded and well-meaning husband was beyond bounds when on hurrying into the kitchen she found the coffee boiling in the new electric percolator on top of the new gas stove, well surrounded by a high flame.

Typewriters in Orchestra

Christmas Party For Children

Girls of Y. W. C. A. Will Give One to Children Who Otherwise Would Not Have Christmas Good Time.

In spite of various turkey suppers about town, there was a large attendance at the Wednesday evening supper at the Y. W. C. A. this week, and a jolly good time was enjoyed. The first announcement at the close of the supper was about the open house on Friday night of this week, to the effect that Samantha and Miranda Allen would give a party for the poor girls of the Y. W.. In other words it will be a poverty party and everybody attending will be expected to appear in their oldest clothes.

Next Wednesday's supper is to be decidedly "different." It is to be a chicken pie supper. All girls and women in town are invited to attend, but all requisitions absolutely must be in at the Y. W. Headquarters next Monday night instead of Tuesday noon as for previous suppers. After the supper there will be a Christmas party, with—maybe—a Christmas tree and Santa Claus and other surprises, according to the announcements by Miss Alma Tyler, chairman of the supper committee.

Miss Horton made the final announcement as to the coming of Margaret Slattery on Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the St. James M. E. Church, when she will address the girls and women of the city on "The Mystic Maze." Miss Horton told of hearing Miss Slattery in France and what she told was enough to enthuse every girl and woman present to go to the meeting Sunday afternoon and take her girl and women friends with her. The Schubert Choral Club will furnish special music. Miss Estey supplemented this announcement by saying that she had had a telephone message from Miss Capen in Newburgh, sending her love to the Kingston girls and stating that a delegation of Newburgh Y. W. members would come up to hear Miss Slattery Sunday. Word had also been received that there would be girls present from Poughkeepsie, Rhinecliff and Rosendale.

Another announcement was to the effect that the Prize Play written by Miss Nan Rodie, would be given twice next week; on Monday night at the Church of the Comforter and Wednesday night at the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church.

There was an announcement of two new classes; one in dressmaking, which needs more members; the other in mandolin playing.

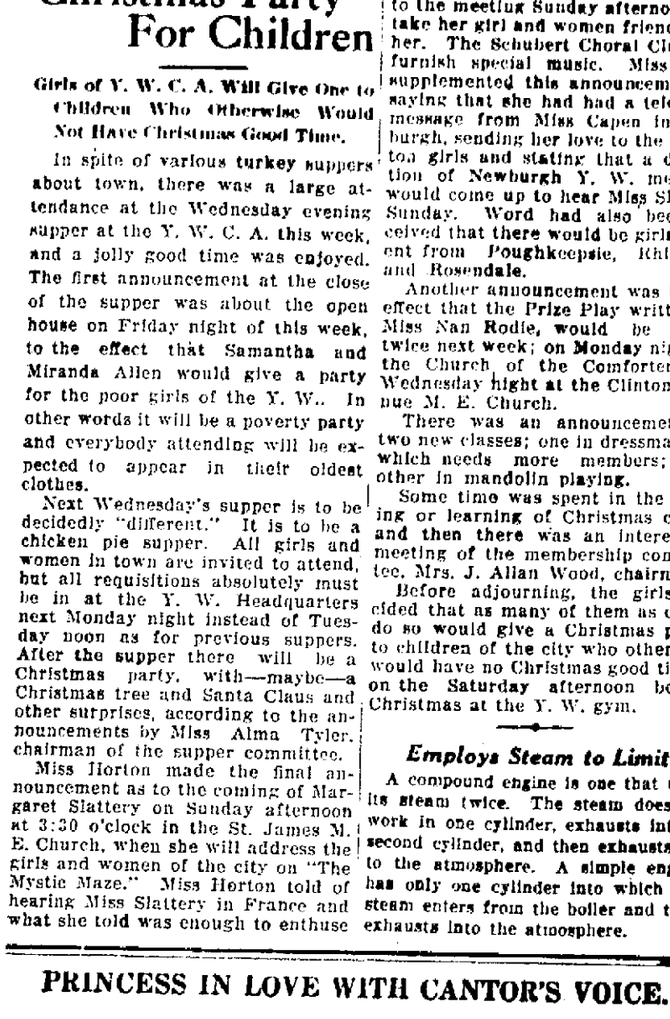

Some time was spent in the singing or learning of Christmas carols and then there was an interesting meeting of the membership committee, Mrs. J. Allan Wood, chairman.

Before adjourning, the girls decided that as many of them as could do so would give a Christmas party to children of the city who otherwise would have no Christmas good times, on the Saturday afternoon before Christmas at the Y. W. gym.

Employs Steam to Limit

A compound engine is one that uses its steam twice. The steam does its work in one cylinder, exhausts into a second cylinder, and then exhausts into the atmosphere. A simple engine has only one cylinder into which the steam enters from the boiler and then exhausts into the atmosphere.

PRINCESS IN LOVE WITH CANTOR'S VOICE.

Princess Juliana, daughter of Queen Wilhelmina, of The Netherlands, is reported to have fallen a victim of a flapper passion for the remarkable voice of the cantor in a Jewish synagogue in Amsterdam. Cabled reports asserted she even posed as a Jewess and visited the synagogue several times, but was finally recognized and her mother informed. The cantor, a widower, thirty years old, with two children, is Gabriel Alaro.

Look In Your Mirror In Ten Days

You would not deliberately choose to look 10 or 15 years older than you are. You would not prefer hollow cheeks, unsightly skin, faded eyes, flabby repellant flesh, and the stooped shoulders of weakness and weariness. You don't like to be shunned, neglected and ignored because you have no animation, magnetism vitality or physical beauty.

But you say you can't help it. You can help it. BURKE'S COD LIVER OIL and IRON now supplied in pleasant tablet form will aid wonderfully in restoring youthful strength and nerve force, building vitality and firm well rounded flesh.

Vacant Places of Earth Await Explorer's March

In spite of the popular superstition that the whole surface of the globe has yielded to the surveyor, enterprising explorers still continue to find parts of it with all the lure of the unknown.

Within comparatively recent times the mysterious oasis of Jabrin, in the great Arabian desert, the remoter regions of Tibet and the Ituri country of Central Africa have all been forced to yield up a few more secrets, says the Living Age.

Capt. R. E. Cheesman, an Englishman, has been able to locate definitely the oasis of Jabrin, whose exact position has long been in doubt among geographers. For six days his little expedition marched over arid desert, relying on such water supplies as they could carry in skins. Throughout the journey he verified his position by astronomical observations and was thereby able to correct such maps of the region as already exist.

He found a savage tribe of Arabs, scarcely to be regarded as Moslem, but harking back to the pagan days before Mohammed began his teaching, and possibly survivors of the earlier native population that is supposed to have preceded the Arabs in the peninsula. These people are still practically living in the Stone age.

Captain Cheesman was able to locate ruins believed to be those of Jerra, the ancient Phoenician port on the Persian gulf, as its position corresponds with that given by Ptolemy about the middle of the Second century; and he also made a collection of geological specimens, together with desert fauna and flora, many of which proved to be new to science.

Base Mutilation on Ancient Mosaic Law

Scattered over the market place of Adis Abeba (capital of Abyssinia), are the flimsy booths and open stalls of native hucksters, fringing it the slightly more pretentious shops of Greek and Indian merchants, and the dilapidated buildings which house the custom house and the post office, E. Alexander Powell tells us, in the Century Magazine.

Here murderers are frequently executed by hanging, and here also lesser malefactors, highwaymen and the like, pay the penalty for their crimes by suffering the loss of a hand or a foot, the sentence being carried out with neatness and dispatch by a local butcher, who checks the bleeding by plunging the stump into melted fat.

Barbarous? Of course. Yet, if you express your disapproval to an Abyssinian, he will politely remind you that they are only obeying the injunction of a law-giver named Moses—the Ethiopian penal code being based on the Mosaic law—who said, "If thine right hand offend thee, cut it off."

Soap Long Known and Used

Soap both as a medicinal and cleansing agent was known to the ancients. Pliny speaks of two kinds, hard and soft, as used by the Germans. He mentions it as originally a Gallic invention for giving a bright hue to the hair. It is probable that soap came to the Romans from Germany. Although soap is referred to in the Old Testament, authorities believe that ashes of plants or other such purifying agents are implied. The earliest kinds of soap appear to have been made of goat's tallow and beech ash. As early as the Thirteenth century, however, a factory for making soap from olive oil was established at Marseilles. Soap making was introduced into England during the next century.

Gave Name to Trees

The sequoia trees of California were named in honor of Sequoia, who was the son of a white man and a Cherokee woman of mixed blood. Sequoia is famous as the inventor of the Cherokee alphabet. He was born in Tennessee, about 1760, and grew up with the Indian tribe. He became a hunter and trader in furs, and also a craftsman in silverwork. In the last years of his life he became interested in tracing a lost band of the Cherokee tribe, that, according to tradition, had crossed the Mississippi river before the American Revolution, and he had wandered to some mountains in the West. He was still pursuing this quest in the Rocky Sierras when he met his death, August, 1843.

Farm and Home Bureau

directors of the Farm Bureau, and Mrs. Warren, of Hurley, Mrs. Epps, of Accord, and Mrs. Rice, of Kingston, as members of the executive committee of the Home Bureau.

Home Bureau's Work.

Mr. Davis then called upon Mrs. Smith, president of the Home Bureau, to give a report of the work of that department. Mrs. Smith stated that she had not prepared a written report, and would have to depend upon Miss Fischer for statistics, but she did tell of the following general efforts of the Home Bureau. Nutrition study has been carried on all over the county. Clothing and civics have been other projects well developed and the Home Bureau did its share in the picnic, thus reducing its deficit considerably. Probably its most outstanding effort this year was the Junior Extension League of Girls in the county who had been learning cooking, canning, sewing, the making of posters, etc. Then the Home Bureau had provided and sent the weather forecasts throughout the county. For this latter service, which seemed to be of even more value to the Farm and Home Bureau, the men of the Farm Bureau gave the women of the Home Bureau a rising vote of thanks.

President Davis's Report.

President Millard Davis gave his report on the condition of the Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau for 1924 as follows:

The Ulster County Farm and Home Bureau has completed another year's work and today are expectantly looking into the future. The Farm and Home Bureaus have been potent factors in the development of Ulster county in the past five years. The bureaus have lent a hand anywhere and everywhere and at any time their help has been requested. Further than this, they have demonstrated their leadership in undertaking such new work as the best interests of the country demanded, and have gone ahead and carried the work through to a finish. I believe our work has justified the bringing of another organization into existence in this much organized work and the work it has done I believe has justified the maintenance from year to year. Our past, I believe, is secure.

And for the future. There is just one thing we cannot do and that is to be smug and contented with what we have accomplished that we think these bureaus will run right along as live organizations without some one continually blowing the breath of new ideas into them and a good, healthy willing-to-help membership trying to work those ideas out. And this wonderful combination we have had in this county.

One of the outstanding accomplishments of our work in this county has been the development of new farm leadership. This has come in every community in the county, and this new leadership has been and is a blessing to the community, to the bureau and to the county.

For the coming year the Farm Bureau must continue its animal T. B. eradication work, must render to each individual farmer of the county whether member or not, such individual help as it can give when called on, must work out schemes for more economical farm production and get us individually to accept those ideas and must give every aid possible to the more orderly, systematic and sane marketing of farm produce. And I hope sometime, somehow, someone, will come along with nerve and ability enough to work out some plan to limit production and so cut out the awful loss and waste now sustained by farmers when they overproduce any commodity, and that the Farm Bureau will help it along when it comes. But this can only come by some form of organized effort.

The Home Bureau I hope will continue its work on nutrition. We dig our graves or work out our air castles with our teeth. And most crimes are committed by dyspeptics. Good digestion makes good neighbors. We have the proper food on farms if we can only learn a little better its preparation and proper use. The nutrition course is only one phase of the wonderful work the Home Bureau is doing to make the farm home the best place to live, move and do our work in, on this earth.

And what we may be able to do in the future is only limited by the amount of time and energy our leaders and members will give to the work and the responsibility they will assume for its conduct in their communities. And these they have freely given in the past. What a stalwart band of enthusiastic workers these bureaus have developed in the county. Gathered here today in a membership meeting we thank them. And we thank our hard working, helpful, enthusiastic bureau managers and their assistants.

In these interesting times of low farm prices and high farm taxes, of small farm incomes and big financial outgo, of high priced farm labor and no money to buy it, our one best bet on better times is through our own united effort expressed in terms of the Farm and Home Bureaus of aid, information and service.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Home Bureau's Work.

Miss Fischer was then called upon for her report, which she said was not as well prepared as she would have liked to have it to be for she really had not known whether or not the Home Bureau would be continuing its work. Her report went in considerable detail regarding the work of that bureau.

State Federation Officer Speaks.

The business having been transacted, Mr. Davis then introduced Peter D. Ten Eyck of Albany, vice-president of the New York State Farm Bureau Federation, who after congratulating those present on the work they were doing and the reports and transactions of the meeting, spoke about the absolute necessity of the farmers organizing and through their organizations using the Farm Bureau as a clearing house for business.

Mr. Ten Eyck was a farmer himself, coming from a long line of farmers, and having seen the farming industry of his own family decrease so that he had been forced out of it by his father for his own good. Now, he said, he was lifting up his voice wherever possible to arouse farmers to adopt business principles, and organize for greater efficiency, the same as finance and labor. His talk was full of practical illustrations and advice of a most timely character, enlivened with many interesting anecdotes. But he made very plain the absolute necessity for organization and cooperation on the part of the farmers if they are to secure their share of the world's business, which they certainly are entitled to. He asked for the individual and loyal support of the Farm Bureau. Then he closed his talk by telling of a meeting of several farmers where there arose an animated discussion as to which was correct: to say that a hen sits or sets. Finally one old farmer was called upon for his verdict and gave it, that he thought the most important thing was when the hen cackled, whether she had laid or lied.

Duty of the Individual.

The last speaker of the afternoon was Prof. Flora Rose of Cornell, who gave an exceedingly pertinent, nontechnical and common sense talk on nutrition. Prof. Rose had a charming personality and out of the facts she gave and the suggestions she offered made it evident that it was showing the best judgment for every adult to make him or herself just as physically fit and so as efficient and perfect a human being as he or she is trying to make of the live stock on the farm, in addition to trying to raise the finest possible crop of children.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, the report of Mr. Winston, the Farm Bureau manager, was omitted and the meeting adjourned to wend its way to Epworth Hall to enjoy a turkey dinner.

Cookery and Slang in Odd Relationship

Why the business of the cook should be used as a vehicle of scorn and revenge is a mystery of our mysterious language.

We boast that we "have settled his hash" when we have "squashed" a man and when counsel very severely cross-examines a witness, or a mistress gives a servant what is commonly called "a piece of her mind," we say that both got "a jolly good roasting." If anyone has been thoroughly bamboozled or made a fool of we say he has been "done brown."

Why do we say that certain circumstances or happenings have put a man "into a pretty stew," or that a certain young man has "got himself into boiling water," which almost certainly refers to the dropping of some living animal, like the lobster, into the pot? And why do we refer to some one who has shown a lack of intelligence as only half baked?

The phrase "I've cooked his goose" has an ancient origin. When Eric, king of Sweden, reached a certain town with very few soldiers, the enemy hung out a goose for him to shoot. Finding, however, that it was no matter for jest, the townsfolk sent heralds to learn what he wanted. His reply was: "To cook your goose for you."—London Tit-Bits.

Musical Instruments

Certain musical instruments are used almost entirely by one sex, others by both. The harp is largely a woman's instrument, but when men do take it up they show marked ability to master it. The piano is very evenly divided between the sexes. Brass instruments are played mainly by men, ukuleles by women. The banjo is a man's instrument, while mandolins are well divided between the sexes. The saxophone, the most popular of all instruments at the present time, is played by both men and women.—John Howe in the American Magazine.

Eagle Gobbles Golf Ball

A possible eagle on the course of the Tallahassee Country club was made impossible by a real eagle, the big bird swooping down on the eighth green to seize a golf ball, as it was trickling in the general direction of the cup, says an Associated Press dispatch from Tallahassee, Fla. Frederick C. Elliot was the victim and gained scant comfort from the assurance that the eagle was "an accident outside the match" and the incident could not be held "a rub of the green."

His Prayer

An old man was asked what he did when he bowed his head in church so reverently just before the service began. "Well," replied the old man, "that's a fair question an' I'll give you a fair answer—I don't know what other folk do, but I always count 10 myself."—Epworth Herald.

The SANDMAN STORY

PETER AND THE FAIRIES

PETER loved the beautiful green fields and all the wild flowers, but best of all he loved the pretty golden-eyed daisy with her ruffled bonnet, and never would he disturb a daisy though it grew in his very garden.

All around the poor cottage where he lived alone grew the daisies in profusion, and one night Peter awoke and saw all the daisies dancing in the moonlight. He jumped out of his bed and ran to the window, thinking he must be dreaming.

It was true. The daisies were all dancing, and among them, taller than the others, was a little lady wearing a ruffled cap, but instead of one golden eye she had a pretty face and two eyes though they were not golden.

Peter slipped on his clothes and ran into the yard, and the little lady smiled and ran, but she beckoned to Peter to follow her.

Peter was so intent upon watching the running figure that he did not notice he was in a strange palace right in the midst of a daisy field.

The little lady ran up the marble steps and held out her hand to Peter. "Come," she said. "You are the friend of the daisy fairies and they sent me to bring you here for tonight. We are to have a grand feast and dance and the fairies said it would not be complete without you, because you never harm the daisies."

Then into the marble palace she led Peter, and for the first time he thought of his ragged clothes. "Don't worry about your clothes," said the little lady who seemed to know his thoughts. "I shall take you to our Queen and she will make everything right for you."

Peter next was taken to a big room hung with white and gold, and on a throne made of daisies sat a tiny little creature with hair of gold color and dressed all in white. She wore a ruffled cap, too, just like the little lady who had brought Peter to the palace.

"You are the daisies' friend," said the little creature on the throne, "and for your kindness we invite you to the grand ball and feast we shall have tonight. Kneel, that I may touch you with my wand."

A touch light as a feather on Peter's shoulder, and when he stood up he was dressed in a black velvet suit trimmed with gold lace, silk stockings and black shoes, shiny ones with bright buckles.

"Now let the dance begin," said the Queen with a wave of her wand; and up from the floor sprang hundreds of daisy fairies and began to dance. They caught at Peter and pulled him with them, and away they all whirled, until a silvery tinkle was heard and the panels at one side of the room slid open and there was a table loaded with goodies such as Peter never expected to see, much less taste.

A big gold chair was at one end of the table and another one at the other end, but this was tiny, such as a fairy person would use, and in this sat the Queen, but she told Peter he was to sit in the other, for tonight he was king of the feast.

Peter's plate was piled with good things, and all the time soft music sounded, though where it came from Peter did not know.

When Peter had eaten all he could and was wondering if he would be able to get up from the gold chair, a silvery tinkle sounded again and Peter rubbed his eyes.

He wasn't in the palace of the daisy fairies at all. He was in bed in his own poor cottage and the sun was shining in the window.

But the bell he still heard, and, when he looked out of the window, in the midst of the daisies stood a beautiful white cow with a silver bell around her neck.

The cow proved to belong to a rich man who prized her very much, and when Peter returned the cow the rich man gave him a big reward, and, best of all, he asked Peter to come and work for him and live in a comfortable house on his big farm.

And all of this Peter says he owes to the daisy fairies, for though it may all have been a dream—the night he feasted and danced with the fairies—he still believes that because of his fondness for the pretty daisy the fairies brought all of his good luck by sending the white cow to his door.

The Why of Superstitions

By H. IRVING KING

THE MOUNTAIN ASH

ANYBODY who knows anything at all about witches knows that a branch of the rowan tree—or, as it is more generally called, mountain ash—will keep those objectionable persons at a distance and act as a counter-charm to their sorcery. In some parts of the country the rowan is accounted equally efficacious against thieves. In Maine housewives stir their lye, in making soap, with a stick of rowan, in order that the soap may be hard and of good quality. And everywhere they will tell you that to beat a child with a rod of mountain ash stops its growth.

The superstition with regard to the mystic qualities of mountain ash has Northern Europe as its country of origin and flourished there in the early days. In northern Europe it still lingers and from northern Europe we inherit it. Formerly in some parts of Ireland the villagers used to appear on May day bearing a hoop covered with marigolds and sprigs of mountain ash, within which hung two balls, one covered with gold paper and one with silver, to represent the sun and moon. The marigolds were, of course, to supplement the yellow ball, the sun, which would indicate that anciently in Celtic mythology, at least, some connection was conceived to exist between the other decoration, the rowan, and the moon-goddess.

Be that as it may, it is reasonable to suppose that the rowan got its mystic reputation in Norse mythology—as it got its common English name—from the resemblance of its foliage to that of the true ash, the sacred tree of our Aryan forefathers—Igdrasil, the tree of life. One old name for the rowan was the "quicken tree"—quicken in the sense of to make alive—which would seem still further to connect the mountain ash with the sacred Igdrasil.

"What's in a Name?"

By MILDRED MARSHALL

Facts about your names in history, mythology whence it was derived; the significance your lucky days, lucky jewels.

LETTY

ONE of the "glad" names is Letitia. It comes from the Latin adjective laetus, meaning glad, from which the substantive, "laetitia," was formed. Whether ancient Rome underwent a "glad" period, etymologists do not record, but the fact remains that Laetitia as a proper name was adopted by the fashionable maids and matrons of that bygone empire.

Laetitia first made her appearance as Letizia, a name favored by the Italians during the fashion for extreme novelty that prevailed in the Cinque cento. Spain adopted Letizia.

In Ireland Lettice was extremely popular. One famous bearer of the name was Lettice Knollys, the wife of the Earl of Essex. Letitia was evolved in Ireland, and is still a favorite with Irish lassies, though Letty, the diminutive, is by far the most popular form.

Letitia and Letty are both in vogue in this country. The touch of propriety which has become associated with Letitia has somewhat lessened her vogue, but Letty flourishes after the manner of all contractions in America.

The turquoise is Letitia's talismanic stone. If set in gold, it will protect her from all danger, especially when traveling. According to an old legend, the stone will break at the approach of evil. The best possible good luck is promised Letty if she can see the new moon reflected in her turquoise. Saturday is her lucky day.

AS TO LUCK

I DO not pray for Luck,
Since I've small use for chance.

Bird Hunts Snakes

The fanciful resemblance of the long feathers of his crest to a quill pen thrust behind the ear suggested the name "secretary" bird. This bird's habits, says Nature Magazine, are far from literary, as its business in life is hunting snakes and similar animals. It is an African, and is one of the largest birds of prey.

Curious Pullman Train Passengers Enjoyed Themselves Watching President and Mrs. Coolidge on Trip to Chicago.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Ill., Dec. 4.—The president of the United States, traveling in an ordinary Pullman on a regular train, "even as you and I," arrived in Chicago this morning at 8:30.

An enthusiastic crowd, undaunted by inclement weather, stormed about the Baltimore and Ohio station and thronged the route to the Drake Hotel, save Calvin Coolidge, his wife and members of his party Chicago's welcome.

It seemed a great lark for the President and Mrs Coolidge, this traveling as casual passengers aboard an ordinary Pullman train—if not for the White House retinue.

The Coolidges, the Stearns, the McCormicks and others in the presidential party, ate their meals in the dining car, apparently unmindful of the stares of the other passengers, and chatted informally in the observation car just as do the commercial travelers bound for the buying centers of the west.

Observing his customary calm, the president did not indicate his like or dislike of this precedent-breaking trip. Mrs. Coolidge keenly enjoyed it.

Until a late hour last night and beginning again early this morning, a constant stream of fellow passengers passed through the car bearing the presidential party, taking hasty glimpses into the Coolidge drawing room, when the door was open. The dining car was crowded earlier this morning than it has ever been before, according to the steward. Breakfasters lingered longer over their coffee.

Secret service men were stationed at either end of the car throughout the night. Ordinarily, any one attempting to enter the presidential car on the usual presidential train, would be sharply challenged, but on this trip, the strollers went unchallenged.

OVERLAND MODEL 91 NOT TO BE DISCONTINUED

Stories to the effect that the Overland model 91 which has proved to be so popular among Overland owners was to be changed or discontinued by the company are denied by L. G. Reed, general sales manager, and by George J. Schryver, local dealer.

Mr. Reed sent out a letter to the selling force of the company stating that in a recent advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post the artist took certain liberties in reproducing the car which conveyed the impression that the design was to be changed. He states that no changes are contemplated and none have been made in the popular design of the 91 touring car.

Mr. Schryver of the George J. Schryver Motor Car Company, local dealers in this territory, adds that stories have been circulated that the Overland four cylinder model is to be discontinued. In denial, Mr. Schryver cites the letter of Mr. Reed as authority that the model will be continued.

ELKS TO HOLD "SAUGERTIES NIGHT."

Kingston Lodge, B. P. O. E., will hold a "Saugerties night" at the Elks' Home, Fair street, on the evening of Thursday, December 11. There will be initiation of a class of 41, whose applications for memberships have been favorably acted upon. Twenty-eight of the class are from Saugerties and these applicants will be accompanied to Kingston by a number of Elks from that town, who are members of Kingston Lodge. There will be luncheon served. The Christmas fund for the poor is meeting with good success and members who desire to aid may notify Hugh McTague, the treasurer of the fund committee.

METTACAHONTS.

Mettacahonts, Dec. 4.—On Friday evening, November 28, a very enjoyable evening was spent when several friends tendered Mrs. Oscar Markle a birthday surprise party. The evening was spent in playing games, performing stunts of various kinds, card playing and dancing. At 11 o'clock refreshments of cake, coffee and candy were served, after which some fine piano and violin selections were rendered. The guests departed at a late hour wishing Mrs. Markle many more happy birthdays. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Markle, Mr. and Mrs. John Van Dermark and son Vernon, Miss Beulah Van Dermark, Mrs. Jane Van Dermark, Mrs. S. E. Churchwell, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Burger and sons, Daniel and Joseph, Miss Lillian Osterhoudt, Mrs. Spencer Traver and sons, Albert and Harry, and the Misses Mildred and Anna Hornbeck.

Mrs. John Restine of Peekskill, who was formerly Miss Ray Markle of this place, visited her many friends and relatives recently, who were all glad to see her again.

Mrs. Rachel Anderson, who is seriously ill, remains the same at this writing.

No Martyrdom for Communist

Former French Citizen, Now a Russian, Arrested When Officers Learn He Was Intended as Martyr—Pretext for Violence.

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Paris, Dec. 4.—The French communist Jacques Sadoul, who was a captain of the French army in 1917 and became a naturalized Russian citizen and later a high Soviet official after being sent on a French mission to Russia, was arrested at his hotel at noon today.

Sadoul was condemned to death for desertion November 8, 1919.

His arrest was made as French communists were bidding a noisy welcome to Leonid Krassin, Soviet ambassador to France.

It was reported that Sadoul was orderd to Paris by the Third Internationale for the purpose of making him a martyr and furnishing a pretext for communist demonstrations of a violent nature.

Six hours before his arrest L'Humanite came out with the announcement of a gigantic campaign for amnesty for political offenders.

McGRANE CHARGED WITH INTERFERING WITH OFFICER

John McGrane of this city, was arrested Wednesday night by Officer Urban Healey on a warrant charging him with interfering with an officer in making an arrest at a dance at Eddyville. McGrane was turned over to the sheriff's office, and later gave bail for his appearance before Justice Webber in the town of Ulster.

Calvaries of Paris Are Rapidly Passing

Slowly the calvaries of Paris are vanishing. The old walls on which penitence and adoration erected them have crumbled, have been swept away, and the new walls know no calvaries. Here and there, however, writes "F. G. H." in the continental edition of the London Mail, the great and sorrowful symbol of the Christian faith may still be seen.

In remote corners, just out of the swift current of the city's life it stands unheeded by the busy crowds. Only the birds sometimes flutter round it, and in the manner of some medieval legend, we might believe the feathered things cared for something that humanity had almost forgotten. Of such calvaries one may be found at the corner of the Rue d'Aubervilliers and the Rue de l'Evangile.

It has its place not in one of the loveliest parts of the great city, and we might be disposed to question the work itself from the standpoint of mere art. But there it stands, and a creeper droops half caressingly around the head of it. It breaks suddenly the level contour of an ugly wall. And sometimes it may seem that nothing was ever broken in a manner more wonderful than this poor wall is broken by the dolorous calvary.

Police Dogs "Wolfish"

The police dogs are not a distinct breed, but are shepherd dogs police trained. The German police dog should stand 22 to 26 inches at the shoulder and show in every line the qualities which he is supposed to possess—intelligence, alertness, loyalty, gentleness, courage, obedience, willingness and devotion. While the standard allows great range of color, those most often seen in this country are of the so-called "wolf" colors, dark tipping of hair over a tawny or buff ground. The muzzle (unlike that of a wolf) is usually blackish. Both the German and Belgian dogs may be divided into three general types—smooth, rough-haired, wire-haired and smooth-haired. By their erect ears and general expression they betray their near relationship to the wolf.

To Hesitate Is Fatal

They stood in the wings of the opera house. In a few moments she was to go on.

"One last word," said the conductor. "Ten, maestro?"

"If you forget your lines do not hesitate. Never falter."

"But what shall I sing?" asked the new diva.

"That is the point. Be prepared. Sing the multiplication table with your best runs and trills. Nobody will ever know the difference."—Pittsburg Chronicle-Telegraph.

ROAD BUILDING

TRAVELER'S TAX FOR POOR ROADS IS BIG

There is an oft asserted statement that paved roads pay for themselves—but how and in what coinage? Is the pay to be taken in better living conditions that can scarcely be measured in dollars and cents or can a real money earning value be placed on them?

The Arizona Gazette Phoenix is in an excellent position to answer that question, since Maricopa county in which that daily is located has the largest mileage of concrete roads of any single county in the world—a total of 807 miles of concrete. These roads were let in two contracts and the enterprise commanded nation wide attention during their construction in 1920-23. This newspaper editorially quotes statements of Highway Engineer H. E. Phelps of the College of Engineering, state of Washington, in which he decries the attempt to lower taxes by an "assault upon the taxes being levied for good roads." As this authority sees it, the traveler's tax for poor roads is greater than the tax necessary to build good roads. He says:

"If we had concrete surfaces to drive upon, we could pay a tire tax of 67 per cent and still spend no more for tires than is required for our present road surfaces."

Mr. Phelps then calls attention to the experiments that have been made to determine the amount of gasoline that is needed on different kinds of roads, saying that these experiments show that a gallon of gasoline will haul one ton 14 miles on earth roads, 21 miles on gravel and 31 miles on concrete.

Taking the weight of an automobile as 1.4 tons and the price of gasoline as 20c per gallon, this highway engineer tells what happens to your gasoline tank as the car passes over various kinds of roads in the following manner:

"When the car reaches the end of the concrete and starts down a gravel surface, the extra gasoline required costs as much as a tax of 62-3 cents per gallon, and when it reaches the end of the gravel and starts down the average poor earth road, an added cost of ten cents per gallon is the traveler's tax caused by the poor road."

In a similar vein, Fred R. White, chief engineer of the Iowa state highway commission, addressed the county supervisors of his state in August, 1922, telling them that highway taxes represent less than 15 per cent of total taxes and are responsible for only one-eighth of the total increase in taxes since 1910. "Whenever a cigar is lighted," he said, "the smoker proceeds to burn up the highway taxes of the average Iowan for from three to six days" and also "a quarter section of land taxed at $2 an acre contributes approximately one cent per acre to the county engineering work."

Tourists Repay Canada for Cost of Good Roads

Canada has spent $191,000 in building good roads in the last five years, according to John B. Harkin, Dominion commissioner of parks.

"The Dominion has received $118,000,000 in revenue from foreign tourist traffic in the same period," Mr. Harkin said. "Improvement of highways has been a big factor in the development of Canada's touring trade. The Dominion knows it is not spending money on roads, but merely investing it. Good roads mean general prosperity. They save farmers millions of dollars in hauling costs annually."

Good Road Hints

The annual highway expenditures are approximately $1,000,000,000.

The famous old Roman road, Via Appia, is 2,000 years old, and is still in a marvelously good state of repair.

* * *

In the last 13 years investments in automobiles have increased about 2,700 per cent and highway expenditures have in the same time increased about 600 per cent.

* * *

It is believed that the states in co-operation with the federal authorities should work out some system whereby more of the highway appropriations may be utilized in constructing farm to-market roads.

* * *

Good roads, canals and navigable rivers by diminishing the expense of carriage, put the remote parts of a country nearly on a level with those in the neighborhood of a town; they are, upon that account, the greatest of all improvements.—Adam Smith.

* * *

More and more good roads and better motor cars are making touring one of the favorite American pastimes.

* * *

It is felt that in order to increase the efficiency of motor truck transportation federal aid will have to be extended to the farm-to-market roads.

* * *

Remains of the first recorded roads are still in existence. They were built by the Assyrian empire about 1900 B. C. and like the spokes in a wheel, radiated from Babylon to the corners of the empire.

CURRENT OFFERINGS AT THE THEATRES

Vaudeville will again be shown at the Kingston Opera House which opens again tonight with their high class program of five great vaudeville acts and special feature photoplay. The feature attraction is The Black and White revue of six of the snappiest, jazziest musical, singing and dancing revue direct from the world's latest vaudeville circuit. The Three Bennetts in their sensational daredevil aerial thriller. Howard and Jenkins in their singing and comedy sketch Harold and Do Re Me, a beautiful musical number completes the program. The photoplay will be "Fires of Youth" a Paris romance on the style of "The Old Homestead" with an all star cast of favorites. The performances will be given as usual at 2:30 7 and 9 o'clock, and the program will change every Monday and Thursday.

"The City That Never Sleeps," Paramount's drama of New York, opens this evening at Kempf's for a three days run. Adapted by Walter Woods and Anthony Coldeway from Leroy Scott's absorbing story, "Mother O'Day," and produced by James Cruze with an all-star cast, this photoplay has all the advance earmarks of being a motion picture de luxe.

At the Auditorium tonight Robert Z. Leonard presents Mae Murray in a picturesque romance, "Fashion Row." From a Russian dive to the Broadway Palace—virtue, vengeance and vodka—debts, letters and tears, perhaps in a Russian vodka dive. A wife thrust? The same girl posing as a Russian princess in New York's society.

Vaudeville of the better kind is being offered at the Orpheum Theater today, tomorrow and Saturday. Charles Jones in his latest William Fox thriller, entitled "Western Luck," is the picture. This picture is described as a whirlwind romance that takes the star from the wilds and wooly west to Wall street and back. Plenty of thrills and fast situations are contained in this picture, according to advance information. Playing with the popular star in the feminine lead is Beatrice Burnham, one of the most popular girls on the screen. The story and scenario for "Western Luck" was written by Robert Lee.

Y. M. H. A. Quintet To Practice.

All members of the Y. M. H. A. basketball team are requested to appear for practice this evening at Phillips Hall, Port Ewen.

West in Grip of Severe Storm

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Chicago, Dec. 4.—The west today was in the grip of the first severe storm of the season which was taking its toll of crippled wires and demoralizing traffic.

Entire communities in the Dakotas, Nebraska, Western Kansas and Colorado, on which the storm swept down from the mountains today, were cut off from outside communication and fragmentary reports trickling into Chicago told of severely low temperatures and cities encrusted in the ice of frozen rain.

Swirling snow flurries, the advance herald of the storm, greeted early rising Chicagoans today and the temperature continued to drop as the day progressed, an indication of the eastward movement of the cold wave.

Honest at Least

Her blond prettiness and dainty attire attracted a woman as she stood beside her in the public library. From her chic satin hat to her trim little shoes she was the last word in feminine smartness.

She had asked the librarian for the most widely read book of the day and the librarian was doubtful whether there was a copy in at present, but after searching a few moments returned and handed her the desired book.

"Oh, goodness, no! It has too many pages; I heard so much about it I just thought I should read it, but that's too much of a job," and thanking the girl very sweetly, tripped out of the building, leaving a faint trace of perfume and a wide-eyed librarian behind her.

POULTRY

ROASTING CHICKENS FINISHED ON MILK

Much of the poultry sold to the consuming public is in an unfinished condition. Fleshing or fattening puts weight onto the birds, improves the flavor, causes the muscles to become tender and the bones brittle. Theoretically the fat is distributed between the muscle fibers in a way similar to the marbling in roasts and steaks. In the roasting method of cooking poultry, the fat assists in shortening the time of cooking. This may be contrasted with the lean bird which requires longer cooking and from which the water evaporates, leaving the bird in a dry and tough condition.

Most milk feeding of roasting chickens by the producer is done in the fall when the weather is cool and the birds can better stand confinement. The time just preceding Thanksgiving and Christmas is most desirable. Young birds weighing from 3½ to 4½ pounds are about the right weight for fall feeding. Broiler fleshing is done in the spring when the birds weigh about one-half pound less than the market demand, which is normally two pounds.

Two common methods of feeding are pen and crate fattening. For farm purposes pen fattening will be satisfactory because no special equipment is needed. The birds are confined to a limited coop area where they will get little or no exercise. The lack of exercise helps to make the bird tender.

Purdue university has found the following ration and method of feeding quite satisfactory:

Two pounds ground corn
One pound ground whole oats
One pound flour middlings
Eight pounds liquid buttermilk.

This is mixed at the feeding prior to the one it is to be fed. When fed, it should pour and be of a thick cream of pancake-batter consistency.

The birds should receive no feed for 24 hours previous to their first milk feeding. This is done in order to free the intestines from feed and to get the birds hungry. Thereafter they should be fed in troughs twice a day, early in the morning and late in the afternoon. From 10 to 14 days is the usual length of time for feeding. For the first three or four days until they are "on feed," the feed should be in front of them for only 10 minutes; for the next three or four days, 15 minutes, and for the last days, 20 minutes. The birds should be hungry at each feeding. If they are not hungry at each feeding, that feeding should be withheld.

Only in very hot weather should anything other than the two regular feedings be given. At such a time the birds may have a very thin mixture of the ration given at noon.—L. H. Schwartz, Purdue University.

Summer Hardest Season to Produce Good Eggs

Summer is the hardest season in which to produce quality eggs and for that reason a producer of such should have very little trouble getting a few cents more per dozen. It really costs no more to produce a good egg than a poor one, though it is perhaps a little more work.

The first thing to do when producing quality eggs is to dispose of the roosters. This is the greatest trouble with summer egg production. The egg starts to incubate and then the embryo dies leaving the egg unfit for food. The second thing to do is to never neglect gathering the eggs twice a day.

The third thing to do is to keep the eggs in a cool cellar or cave. They should never be kept in a musty place as an egg will take up odors as quickly as milk. By following these three rules you will not find it difficult to produce eggs that will be a credit to the producer.

Poultry Notes

Keep grain before all the stock.

Select best pullets and give good care.

Keep young chicks moving on to new ground. It prevents coccidiosis.

Pullets that are small for their age and apparently lacking in vigor are seldom profitable.

It pays to watch the development of the pullets and if they seem to be maturing too rapidly you can take away the mash and feed only scratch grain.

It pays to cull the pullets. Many flocks are reduced in vigor because every pullet that is pays bread to hold over.

Crowding in the houses overheats the birds at night. When they come out on the cool ground in the morning there is a danger of taking cold.

Every farmer who markets eggs can help to establish confidence in eggs as a principle, satisfied food by collecting his eggs daily and marketing them at least twice a week.

Beekeepers Find Demand for Honey

Popular Sweet Is as Old as Race and Always Held in High Esteem.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Beekeeping is an industry under development in this country as public appreciation of honey as a food continues to grow and create a demand. Honey is a sweet as old as the race and always held in esteem. Its flavor and aroma vary with the predominating kind of flower which the bees visit. Besides its use for table purposes honey is much used in cooking to replace all or part of the sugar, and it serves a purpose like that of sugar in the diet—it is a source of energy in readily available form.

The research of the bee-culture laboratory of the bureau of entomology of the United States Department of Agriculture is intended to throw light on the problems which arise in the beekeeping industry, such as the diseases affecting bees and the factors affecting the flow, flavor or color of honey. Practically all of the extension teaching in this field has been turned over to the several states, which have continued it almost without exception. The correspondence of the laboratory is heavy. While the beekeepers of the country are at the present time contending with low honey prices in the general market they are, as a rule, still caring for their bees as well as ever and are sending as many inquiries to the United States Department of Agriculture as formerly.

Divisions Co-Operate.

Several other divisions of the department co-operate with the bee-culture laboratory in work which concerns the beekeeper. These include the carbohydrate and microchemical laboratories of the bureau of chemistry, three offices of the bureau of agricultural economics, and the office of co-operative extension work. From time to time various other offices and bureaus contribute information.

Straw or Other Bedding Will Save Liquid Manure

In the average horse and cattle stall, where flushing with a hose is not practiced, the cheapest and most satisfactory way of saving the liquid manure is by using plenty of straw or other bedding to absorb it. This produces a large amount of valuable manure which should go onto the fields at the earliest opportunity.

In large and well-equipped dairy stables, where there is a concrete gutter and manure alley and where these are flushed every day with a hose, drains are usually provided to run the liquid manure into a concrete cistern. From the cistern it is sometimes pumped onto the spreader loads of manure as they are hauled to the fields, while in other cases they are pumped into tank wagons or sprinkling carts and spread in that way.

Proof That Molasses Is Not Best Food for Pigs

The Pennsylvania experimental station tells of an experiment where one lot of pigs was fed two parts shelled corn, one part molasses, and tankage on rape pasture. The pigs without molasses gained about one-fifth pound more than the pigs with molasses. Moreover, it took about two pounds of molasses to equal in feeding value one pound of corn. Pigs do not seem to be as fond of molasses as cattle are. With corn and molasses as they usually prevail it would seem from the Pennsylvania experiments that it is only doubtfully worth while to feed molasses to hogs.

Feeding Flax Straw

Flax straw can be fed to cattle, sheep, or horses with a fair degree of success as a part of the roughage ration. It does not have a very high feeding value and the live stock should not be expected to get a very big part of their ration from it. Flax which has been frozen while still green is a dangerous feed, especially if stock is allowed to eat it soon after it is frosted the first time. The so-called prussic acid poisoning results from such frozen feed.

Weight of Egg Shells

One scientist has found that 8 per cent of the average egg is composed of shell and it takes 1.6 pounds of shell to cover the eggs of a hen producing 160 eggs per year. This gives an idea of what a high powered shell factory the 200 to 300-egg hen must be. It means that oyster shells must always be present or the hen cannot manufacture enough shell to cover the eggs she is capable of laying.

Dry Mash Is Favored

Some poultrymen are having good results by adding to the dry mash what is called the Ohio mineral ration. It consists of 40 per cent fine ground limestone and 20 per cent salt. Four per cent of the mineral ration is sometimes added to the dry mash in place of the meat scrap. And it is also used when the mash contains less than 10 per cent meat scrap.

Weak-Shelled Eggs

It is not only soft-shelled eggs that result in loss. The thin-shelled eggs that are good enough for home use may be cracked, cracked or entirely broken in transit and this injures the appearance of a crate of eggs. Weak-shelled eggs used for hatching are quite broken in the mesh of moving belts.

Get "Fool's Gold"

Sir Martin Frobisher, the English navigator, although a gallant sailor, was no judge of gold. He was sent on two expeditions, in 1577 and 1578, to find gold, and on each occasion brought back worthless ore.

Old Japanese Legend of Lantern and Fan

A story of the origin of the lantern and the fan, as told in Japan, concerns a public official who had two beautiful daughters. As the story goes, the girls, who were the treasures of the father's heart, longed to pay a visit to a friend in another city.

The father, however, was unwilling for them to go, as he feared some young man of high degree would win their love and thus take them from him. In reply to their entreaties the father told them they could go, providing they promised to bring back to him fire wrapped in a paper and wind wrapped in paper.

The girls did not know what to do. They were in despair until one of their maids told them not to worry, but go and consult a certain wise woman who lived near the home of the friend whom they were to visit. After promising their father they would fulfill his wishes they set out for the friend's home. The father was greatly surprised when, upon their return, the daughters presented him with fire enclosed in a beautifully designed paper lantern and wind in a quaint-shaped paper fan. Thus, it is said, according to a story printed in the Pathfinder Magazine the lantern and fan came into use.

Blind Persons Read Character by Voice

The similarity of voices is not confusing (to the blind) as a rule. Many are similar, to be sure, but I have never encountered absolute doubles, and in general voices are as sharply differentiated as faces—in fact, often far more.

The only difficulty I have experienced, strangely enough, is caused by one person's having several voices. All of us have; we change tone and quality more or less unconsciously according to our mood and condition. But in some the change is dismayingly marked. One woman, for example, has as many as five voices, each quite distinct.

The physical condition is also revealed by the voice in a striking degree, both as to change and normal characteristics. Fat people, for example, have a voice quality which is all but invariably detectable.

Character, too, is easily read. In fact it seems that character is revealed in the voice even more fully and accurately than in the face, no doubt because the subject, failing to recognize this, makes less of an attempt to mask the voice.—Charles McGee Adams, in the Atlantic Monthly.

Odd Garden Products

Little Johnny, who was of school age, was on his way home from the week-night prayer meeting, where he had fallen asleep, a writer in the Youth's Companion reports. His father, who had had great difficulty in waking him at the close of the service, was walking by his side, holding his hand. Fearing that the boy would go to sleep again and that he should have to carry him, the father quickened his pace and, twitching the little fellow's hand vigorously, asked him briskly where he had been that day.

"Over to Mr. O'Neal's," was the drowsy reply.

"And what were they doing at Mr. O'Neil's?"

"Makin' garden," Johnny replied listlessly.

"And what did they plant?"

Johnny yawned. "Planted lett's an' onions a '—" he stumbled, and his tongue grew thick.—"an' radishes an' peas—an' q's—an' r's—an' s's—"

At that point the father picked him up and carried him.

Tailteann Games

The Tailteann games which have been successfully revived in Ireland are so called in perpetuation of the name of Queen Tailte, who tradition says reigned over Ireland some hundreds of years before Christ. Ruling chieftain she adopted a youth named Lugh, who succeeded to the throne at her death. In grateful memory of his foster-mother, King Lugh organized an "Aonach Tailteann"—that is, Tailte's festival—to which each Irish chieftain brought his best athletes, his best horsemen, his most expert harpists. The festival, once established, was continued, with certain interruptions for nearly 2,000 years. Then it lapsed, to be revived by the Free State government.

Utilize Old Colored Prints

Old French or Spanish prints may be used to make a fascinating screen. The background is of heavy natural colored linen and the prints three on each side are pasted on. To hold them together and give the effect of a design there are decorative motifs stenciled in colors. Godey prints are used in the same way.

Johnson Leads League Pitchers

By Telegraph to The Freeman

New York, Dec. 4.—American League pitching records, made public today, show that Walter Johnson Senators' "ace" in their climb to a pennant, was far and away the best of the junior circuit's hurlers. He led his rival in percentage of games won and lost and set the low mark of 2.72 earned runs per game.

Johnson won 23 games and lost seven during the season, compiling an average of .767. Herb Pennock of the Yankees was ranked second in games won and earned runs, and Stan Baumgartner, Athletics' star, was third in both departments.

Johnson fanned 158 batters during 1924.

Morgenweckers Beat Brooklyn

Harry Riconda Plays Smart Game and Cages 16 Points—Kingston Now Two Games In The Lead.

Harry Riconda, flashy forward of the Kingston Metropolitan League quintet, paved the way for a Morgenweck victory over the Brooklyn outfit Wednesday evening at the armory court by his steady floor work and sensational shooting. Riconda, while not in the game for the entire period, was high scorer, gleaning a total of 16 points.

With "Soup" Campbell paired in front with Riconda and C. Husta going in the backfield with Artus the locals presented a very strong line-up. Husta was especially effective holding down the mighty Banks to but five points and registering in his own column ten points.

For the visitors Grody, jumping center and playing in a guard position did the best work. Grody's steady work was the main support of the Brooklynites.

Long shots were the features of the contest and the champions of last season starred from this angle. The total of fields caged by both squads was ten each. The margin in favor of the Morgenweckers was from the fifteen foot line, 20 to 13. Brooklyn was by far the biggest offender, being penalized 32 times to the locals' 23.

Solodar was again the eleventh man in the cage and was given plenty of work. Despite the 56 fouls called during the game, there was some basketball in evidence.

In the opening session the league leaders got away to a good start and completely outplayed Brooklyn, the score at half time ending 26 to 16. Kingston's points came as the result of some clever pass work. Riconda made 11 points in this half.

Conaty was used in part of the game, going in the place of Grimstead in the first and again in the second half. M. Husta was also in the game, taking Riconda's place in the final five minutes.

As a result of last night's win the Kingston team has a stronger hold on first place, being two full games ahead of Yonkers its nearest rival.

Fined $5 for Breaking Windows.

George Murphy of this city was arrested Wednesday by Sergeant Phinney, State Trooper Kenright and Deputy Sheriff E. Gaynor on a charge of disorderly conduct on November 30, at Baldwin's Hall, Eddyville. He was taken before Justice of the Peace Walter Webber at Flatbush, town of Ulster and found guilty. A fine of $5 was imposed and he was given a warning to be less strenuous in public places. It was alleged Murphy broke some windows at Baldwin's hall.

Famous Swiss Valley

The Lauterbrunnen is a deep and narrow valley in the canton of Berne, Switzerland, inclosed by perpendicular walls of sandstone from 1,000 to 1,600 feet in altitude. From these heights descend cascades on every side, chief among which is the famous Staubbach ("dust-stream"). The sun is hardly seen at all there in winter, and even in July not before 7 a. m. Through the valley flows the Weisse-Lutschine, one of the tributaries of the Aar.—Kansas City Star.

Build Impregnable Vault

The Bank of France has constructed a safety deposit vault which they believe to be absolutely impregnable to raids from land or air. It is surrounded by a deep moat and has a bomb-proof roof. Heavy steel girders, and concrete several feet in thickness, form the top, which is impervious to explosives that might be dropped from aircraft. Over the moat, containing 12 feet of water, a sliding floor from an adjacent building provides access to the single entrance of the vault. When the bridge is withdrawn, a steel door closes flush with the walls, guarding the opening to the deposit boxes as the portcullis protects the gateways to old castles. An observer's chair, suspended above the moat from an overhead track, provides a seat for a lookout to watch for attacks from robbers or bombers. The plan was devised by an American architect, and has proved so successful that it is to be used in the construction of other vaults.

Birds Crossing the Desert

The secretary of the Egyptian legation in Washington, Hassanein Bey, writing in the National Geographic Magazine, says that when he was exploring the Libyan desert in 1923 he met with small birds migrating northward to Europe. These small birds, many of them European robins, fly 250 miles over the desolate desert without a drink of water. "Sometimes these intrepid travelers, apparently astonishing us for even," declares Hassanein Bey, "would alight upon our heads or shoulders. We would give them a drink, and off they would fly again. They never made a mistake and started south. As we went along we saw remnants of wings which told their own story." The robins winter in equatorial Africa.

George Burns Never Banished by Umpire

George Burns, outfielder, who passed out of the National league when released by the Cincinnati Reds, has a record of never having been banished by an umpire in the 12 years he was a big leaguer, 10 years with the Giants and 2 with the Reds.

In forwarding to Burns his unconditional release, President August Herrmann wrote:

"I desire to express my appreciation of your services to the Cincinnati club. They have always been more than satisfactory, and I wish you the greatest success in the future."

He has been a star for several years, but because of his batting, his fielding was overlooked.

Yale Pays Its Tribute to Dartmouth Grid Team

Yale and Dartmouth are likely to build up permanent football rivalries because of the dazzling success of their first match in a quarter of a century.

The brilliant game, although resulting in a 14 to 14 tie, left alumni and undergraduate Yale keen for the eleven as a permanent addition to the Yale schedule.

How Yale felt about the game was indicated when Head Coach Tad Jones took the ball that had been used and went over to congratulate Jess Hawley, Dartmouth head coach, on the around Dartmouth play.

After he complimented Hawley, handed him the ball and asked him to present it to Captain Bjorkman for Capt. Winslow Lovejoy of Yale, the Dartmouth trophy room as a token that Dartmouth had fairly earned

Pierre Wertheimer May Come Again With Horse

If his stables produce another horse of the quality of Epinard he will bring it to America for another test of international racing. Pierre Wertheimer, owner of the French colt which was beaten in four starts here, said before sailing for home.

"Perhaps one of Epinard's sons will be capable of taking the measure of your best," he said; "assuredly it would then be a pleasure to return to the country where I have had many courtesies shown me."

Alexa Stirling to Play Her First Golf in Ye

Alexa Stirling may play her first competitive golf in a year in Florida this winter. The former three-time champion of America was unable to play in the national this year on account of illness. It was the first time she missed in years. In 1923 she was runner-up to Edith Cummings.

A number of the best women golfers in the country are expected to assemble in Florida this winter, including Miss Dorothy Campbell Hurd the champion.

The men's amateur and the open championships in the South during the winter have always seen many of the topnotch performers in action, but the women have never been able to assemble a big or representative field.

Florestine Glenna Collett, former champion, has rather dominated the scene in Florida. It may be different this year if Mrs. Hurd, Miss Stirling, Miss Cummings and some of the other leading stars carry out their promise to enter the tournaments.

Last year California drew a number of the women stars and the "battle" between Miss Cummings and Miss Hollins, not to neglect Mary K. Browne, were replete with thrills.
